TWO MEN ROB CAMBRIDGE BANK

Scandal May Wipe Out 'Amateur' Hockey

LIFE OF SWAMPSCOTT WITNESS THREATENED

THUG SUSPECT IS BLACKMAILER

The arrest of Joseph Allen in the $25,000 Lever Brothers payroll robbery reveals him today as none other than Lester Fogg, formerly of Quincy, who two years ago sought to obtain $10,000 from Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons, Boston society woman, by means of blackmail. He was trapped by Mrs. Emmons, who during the war was known as the "Angel of the 26th Division." But for the intervention of Mrs. Emmons, Fogg today would probably be in jail. She refused to prosecute.

GIRL IN PAYROLL THUG'S ARREST

Lester Fogg, who was betrayed into the hands of the police by a jealous acquaintance, seeking revenge for the theft of the affections of a fickle sweetheart, was arraigned in Cambridge District Court today charged with complicity in the $25,000 payroll robbery at the Lever Brothers plant in Cambridge last Thursday morning.

Judge A. P. Stone ordered the prisoner held for further hearing on May 28. Bail was set at $25,000.

He was arrested early today as he stepped into the Pickwick Club in Beach street to have a dance or two.

Both there and at Cambridge headquarters, he was positively identified by Harold Comeaney, a messenger of the First National Bank of Boston, as one of the five thugs concerned in the robbery.

ON TRAIL OF FOUR OTHERS.

Fogg, whose alias is Joseph Allen, was under heavy guard as he was taken into court. Detectives circulated among the spectators, on the off chance that his alleged accomplices would be drawn into the net by curiosity.

At the same time scores of uniformed police and plain clothes men combed the city for the four who remain at large.

Fogg, whose home is at No. 67 Brighton avenue, has a police record as a society blackmailer.

Two years ago he was arrested for trying to blackmail Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons, prominent socially and in charitable work. She did not press the charge.

BOOTLEG SUSPECT TELLS HOW QUINN BEAT FEDERAL RAID

Police Chief William L. Quinn of Swampscott "tipped" an alleged bootlegger to clear all the premises, as Quinn had learned that Federal agents would make a raid and the chief would have to "beat them to it."

George Murcia, the alleged bootlegger, gave this evidence today at the hearing on the removal of Chief Quinn before the Swampscott selectmen.

Murcia also told how he was forced, he said, to aid the rum-runners under threat of losing his job as caretaker of the Johnson estate at Swampscott. He said he was threatened with death by George McDonald, wealthy Brookline realtor, and by Harry Brown, alleged leader of the rum-running gang, if he "squealed."

On direct examination, questioned by Attorney Santry, counsel for the town of Swampscott, regarding his talk with Chief Quinn, he said:

"I met Chief Quinn on Puritan road, near the Johnson estate. The chief was in an automobile.

"He told me to tell McDonald to go down to the Johnson estate and tell George Garrett or Bill to get all the booze out except seven or eight cases. 'I have to come down there and raid the place,' he said. 'I went down and told Bill.'

MET THE CHIEF AGAIN.

"Then what did you do?" asked Santry.

"I got in my flivver and went down to Forest avenue. I met Chief Quinn and some more cops. He asked me how much could we get out and I told him that Bill said he could get two or three loads away.

"Chief Quinn told me he would

SHEPHERD SMILES AS DEATH TRIAL BEGINS

Chicago, May 18.—Apparently calm and undisturbed by the ordeal, William Darling Shepherd walked through the narrow door of the "bullpen" into Judge Thomas J. Lynch's court today to answer the State's charge of killing William Nelson McClintock, his millionaire ward.

A crowd which taxed the capacity of the little courtroom saw him take his place near the defense counsel table, saw him smile at his wife, sitting a short distance away, and watched him intently as he settled himself to await the picking of the jury.

Shepherd is accused of killing young McClintock, heir to the $1,500,000 fateful McClintock fortune, by the use of typhoid fever germs.

Shepherd counter-charged that it was a plot fostered by a dozen cousins of McClintock to break the will, in order to come in for a division of the fortune and deprive him of his inherited rights.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe will direct the prosecution. Selection of a jury is expected to take two or three weeks.

Shepherd was indicted March 18 in the midst of a coroner's inquest instigated by Harry Olson, Munici-

PASSENGERS JOLTED IN B. & M. ACCIDENT

Only the slow speed at which it was travelling, 100 yards from the Wakefield station, saved a Boston & Maine train from derailment today when a driving rod snapped, tearing up the roadbed for many yards.

Train service was slowed up for half an hour while an emergency crew of repairmen patched up the damage.

The train, a local leaving Reading at 9:07 for Boston, carried its usual quota of passengers when the mishap occurred. They were slightly shaken up and were transferred from the disabled train to a through train from Lawrence to Boston.

STRANGER IS BEATEN, LEFT DYING IN STREET

Lowell, May 18.—An unidentified man, between fifty-five and sixty years old, believed to have been beaten up in a fight, was found lying in First street and is dying at St. John's Hospital.

Three Lowell men, returning home from Lawrence, sighted the unconscious man in the road, stopped and made futile efforts to revive him.

They notified the police and he was taken to the hospital, where his name is on the danger list.

Police believe that he was beaten and taken to First street, where he was left in the road to make it appear that he had been struck by an automobile.

A gold watch and $9.10 in cash were found in his clothing.

Vauclain, at 70, Wins $10,000; Off Drink a Year

Philadelphia, May 18.—Samuel Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works, today presented himself a $10,000 birthday gift. This is Mr. Vauclain's 70th birthday and also the termination of the agreement, made with two friends just a year ago, whereby he was to forfeit $10,000 if he took a drink of liquor in the United States.

At the time of the wager Vauclain asserted prohibition was not a hardship on him because "a person could stop drinking if he made up his mind to do so."

His friends then offered to bet he could not live in this country for one year without taking a drink.

FIRE ROUTS 30 FAMILIES

A block of tenement houses occupied by thirty families and a Standard Oil filling station were saved by water curtains at a two-alarm fire shortly after noon today in Landry Brothers' grain store, No. 953-959 Columbus avenue, Roxbury.

Gaining headway because of the failure of the person who sounded the alarm to properly pull the hook, the flames quickly destroyed the grain store and spread to the second-hand furniture shop of E. Fitzgerald.

Police and firemen, fearing spread of the fire, ordered the women and children in the tenements to hurry into the street.

PHONE CO. WINS SUIT FOR RADIO INFRINGEMENT

Wilmington, Del., May 18 (A.P.)—The Federal District Court in the suit of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company against the Radio Audion Company and Deforest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company today decided that "reasonable royalty" for the infringing of tubes made by the Radio Audion Company between January 1, 1921, and January 9, 1923, will be 89 cents each.

CAMBRIDGE BANK IS ROBBED OF $1,500; ONE SUSPECT HELD

Two men walked into the Harvard square branch of the Harvard Trust Company, Cambridge, today, and while one stood at the door watchfully, the other sidled over to a teller's window, snatched $1,500 in bills and fled.

So boldly was the robbery executed that only one man in the bank besides the teller knew for several minutes what had happened, although several customers were on the floor transacting business.

The one customr who saw the daring robbery, chased the two thugs into the street and informed a nearby traffic officer, who gave chase.

A few blocks away the officer overhauled Joseph Hanson of No. 31 B street, South Boston, and placed him under arrest as one of the bank robbers.

No money was found on Hanson, and police think he was the one who stood at the bank entrance while the second man "snaked" his arm under the teller's wicket to seize the bills.

AMATEUR HOCKEY AT AN END IN HUB

The knell of amateur hockey in Boston has been sounded by charges of professionalism preferred by Irving W. Small, Jr., B. A. A. hockey star, prominent sports followers predicted today.

They declared that a sweeping investigation will result from Small's revelations that amateur hockey players receive salaries, and that the inauguration of all professional hockey at the Boston Arena will follow.

A complete housecleaning in the ranks of track and boing, the other two big amateur sports in Boston and vicinity, was also prophesied, although it was said that the taint of professionalism is far strongest in hockey.

Small's charges, made in connection with a suit for $1,000 against the Boston Arena Company, part of which he contended was salary due him for playing with the B. A. A. hockey team, caused an uproar in Boston's sportdom.

For eighteen years he has played amateur hockey in the city, and he

100 STUDENTS STRIKE TO SAVE TEACHERS

South Portland, Me., May 18.— One hundred students of the South Portland High School were on strike today as a protest against the action of the school board in dismissing five instructors.

The instructors are Mrs. Martha Chase, teacher of French; Miss Esnaseida Mann, teacher of history; Fred P. Hall, athletic coach; Rupert G. Johnson, science and assistant coach, and Ralph J. Hill, teacher of manual training.

The student body is aroused, and the alumni association has joined with them in demanding the retention of at least one of the five teachers.

The students allege that all the instructors were dropped without adequate reason, and that one, who had three years service, was discharged because of the personal enmity of one pupil who had a "pull" with the school board.

Instructor Hall is particularly popular, as he has been successful in building up football teams and has a splendid record.

A petition asking reinstatement has been signed by 500 students and tonight the Students' Council, consisting of five seniors, will discuss the matter with the school board. Alger Powell is leader of the council and Harold B. Haggett is chairman of the school board.

FIREMEN OVERCOME FIGHTING PIER BLAZE

Several firemen were overcome by smoke today during a $2,000 fire on a dredger moored at Pier 1 of the Atlantic Works in East Boston.

The blaze, starting from an overheated stovepipe, threatened several times to sweep the dock, but, by working on the flames in relays, the firemen brought the fire under control with a comparatively small loss.

Smoke that overcame a number of firemen handicapped the workers in the battle.

police that Fogg was going to be at the Pickwick Club today for a little relaxation meant to turn in all five of the thugs.

Taking refuge in anonymity, and the telephone, the tipster called Inspector Stephen Flaherty at headquarters.

STOLE HIS GIRL AWAY.

"The gang that pulled the Lever Brothers job is going to have a reunion at the Pickwick," he said.

"I want them turned in. One of them stole a jane who was going to marry me and I want to get the whole mob.

"The girl tipped me off that they did the job, and are going to have a get-together and a little party."

Nevertheless, when the police reached the well-known dance club, only Fogg appeared. He stoutly maintained his innocence and said he could produce an alibi.

It was that he was so drunk the day the Lever Brothers' job was pulled he didn't know what he was doing; but he was quite sure he was not engaged in robbery.

GAVE TWO ADDRESSES.

Fogg gave the police two addresses. He first said he lived at the Ritz Hotel on Columbus avenue, and later gave his address as No. 87 Brighton avenue.

Police are conducting careful investigations at both places.

The police theory that the daring Lever Brothers holdup was the work of imported gunmen has been entirely overturned by the arrest of Fogg. The holdup was planned and staged by South End thugs and it is believed that when the band is finally rounded up, it will be found that other crimes of violence will be attributed on them.

It was a huge piece of luck that led to the arrest of Fogg.

A man, whose identity is not known, called Inspector Flaherty on the telephone, locating the inspector after considerable difficulty.

"You don't know who I am, but I know you well, Inspector. Please don't try to find out," said the voice on the telephone.

"If you want to grab off those two payroll bandits, have a couple men down to the Pickwick Club about midnight. And be sure you have someone there who can identify Fogg," the voice continued.

STAGE IS SET.

Inspector Flaherty, in charge of the investigation, and Lieutenant Inspector Thomas R. Condy of the Cambridge force, with eight inspectors and Comeseny, one of the bank messengers, went to the Pickwick Club.

The bank messenger was installed in the club checkroom, while in the room with him were Inspectors Flaherty and Condy. The other inspectors were distributed about the club dining room.

For three hours the bank messenger checked hats and coats without giving any sign that he recognized any of the patrons as members of the thug band.

Then, shortly after midnight, a dapper, smartly dressed young man burried in. He handed his hat to the check-room attendant without a glance, and sauntered off to a table.

The bank messenger, at the first glance, became so nervous the two inspectors by his side knew their quarry had arrived.

"That's him! That's him! I'd swear it on my mother's grave," the messenger whispered hoarsely.

"I'd know him among a thousand. I've seen his face every minute since he shoved that gun into my stomach and told me he'd shoot me if I moved." The messenger declared.

Then the officers pounced down on their unsuspecting victim. Inspector Flaherty grabbed Fogg's arms and pinned them to his sides. Inspectors Nellen and Ring seized the man's legs, while Inspector Condy, in a trice, had snapped handcuffs on the man's wrists.

Allen Figured in Emmons Blackmail

Joseph Allen, arrested early today at the Pickwick Club and identified as one of the thugs in the $23,000 Lever Brothers payroll robbery, is said by Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons, none other than Lester Fogg, society Boston society woman, active social worker, and known during the war as the "Angel of the Twenty-sixth division."

SAVED BY VICTIM.

It was only through the compassion of Mrs. Emmons that Fogg was saved from a long term in the penitentiary. She refused to prosecute the man and, at her request, the indictments against him were not pressed in the Suffolk county courts and he was released.

The Emmons' blackmailing case, which was given much publicity throughout the country, grew out of forged letters which the blackmail gang, of which Fogg was a member, sought to use as a means to blackmail Mrs. Emmons of $10,000.

These letters were purported to have been written by Mrs. Emmons to a young naval officer during the war. The blackmailers told Mrs. Emmons that if the letters were made public they would ruin her reputation and destroy her society.

The letters, the blackmailers informed their intended victim came into their possession when they dropped from the pocket of an ex-service man in the South End.

Mrs. Emmons, apparently "falling in with the blackmailers' suggestion that she pay for the return of the letters, arranged for the letters to be turned over to her at the Hotel Touraine.

It was Fogg who walked into the lobby of the hotel and approached Mrs. Emmons as the representative of the blackmail gang. In his pocket he had a large envelope which, he said, contained the letters in question.

CALLED DETECTIVES.

Instead of paying over the $10,000 Mrs. Emmons signaled to detectives, who were secreted nearby, and Fogg was arrested.

When booked at police station he gave his name as Arthur LeBarron and his addresses as No. 499 Columbus avenue, South End, and No. 1526 Broadway, New York.

Police investigation, however, disclosed that his real name was Lester Fogg, the son of an aged widow living at No. 15 Francis avenue, Quincy.

The mother, who insisted her son was not a criminal, although he previously had been arrested for the theft of an automobile, said her little homestead to provide funds with which to defend her son.

The police learned that Fogg was a tool, rather than a member of the blackmail ring which sought to extort money from Mrs. Emmons. The envelope he carried in his pocket and which he believed contained the blackmail letters, was found to contain nothing but slips of paper.

The investigations of the police failed to bring to light the identity of the members of the gang, although the wife of a naval officer was involved in the police probe.

Fogg's record at police headquarters shows he has been arrested on a number of occasions. The police record gives his name as Joseph Allen and it was this name he gave when taken today.

U. S. REFUSAL TO AID KILLS ARMS CONTROL

Geneva, May 18 (I.N.S.).—The United States' refusal to co-operate with a League of Nations bureau resulted in abandonment today of the proposed central bureau for arms traffic control.

The special committee of the arms conference created to find some compromise suitable to Congressman Theodore E. Burton, head of the American delegation, decided to alter completely the arms traffic control plan, eliminating the projected central bureau.

Its members would have been appointed by the League Council.

PRINCE OF WALES GOES TO DYING WOMAN'S SIDE

Port Alfred, South Africa, May 18 (I.N.S.).—Natives and Britishers far from their homeland were relating today an act of consideration by the Prince of Wales as another demonstration of his thoughtfulness.

The Prince attended church services last night. While at church he received a request from a dying woman that she might see him. The Prince went to her home and spoke cheering words to her as he stood at her bedside.

NEWPORT MAN SHOT LEAVING CLUB MEETING

Newport, R. I., May 18 (A.P.)—Vito Claravino, barber, was shot and killed here while leaving an Italian society meeting with John Capocchiano, who was arrested on a charge of murder.

The police said that the man had been on bad terms and that Claravino struck Capocchiano with a monkey wrench on the stairs leading from the meeting room. Capocchiano, it is alleged, then drew a revolver and shot his assailant.

SHEPHERD GOES ON TRIAL AS POISONER

pal Court chief justice, a friend of the McClintock family.

WIFE IS EXONERATED

Besides accusing Shepherd of causing the death of young McClintock, the chief justice also characterized him the central figure in a plot twenty years old and the slayer of McClintock's mother and Dr. Oscar Olson, the latter's brother.

Mrs. Julie (sic) Shepherd, one of the two legal guardians of McClintock, was likened by Judge Olson to Lady Macbeth, called a masculine woman who dominated her weaker husband and was named in the verdict of the coroner's jury as equally guilty with her husband. She won vindication when a Grand Jury refused to indict her.

Jointly indicted with Shepherd, but granted a separate trial, was C. C. Faiman, head of a science school. He confessed he supplied typhoid germs to Shepherd, taught him to keep them and to administer them to McClintock with an assurance of fatal results. He said he was promised $100,000. Faiman was named as chief witness in the trial called today.

McClintock's Fiancee Tells Story of Case

Minneapolis, Minn., May 18.—Miss Isabelle Pope, on board the North Coast Limited coming to Chicago from Oregon today, told how Billy McClintock came to her the day after his birthday in April, 1924, and said that he had signed a will which William D. Shepherd, whose trial for the slaying of McClintock opened in Chicago today, had drawn for him and of which he knew absolutely nothing until it was presented for his signature.

Miss Pope will be a witness for the State when Shepherd is put on trial in Chicago charged with slaying young McClintock.

According to Miss Pope, McClintock did not want to make a will, he never had suggested it and he was sickened with the idea of being asked to sign it.

Miss Pope says that from the time Billy was a little boy he was trained to give everything to Mrs. Shepherd. Whenever Mr. Shepherd asked for money he half apologized but said it was for Julia, his "mother."

"Mrs. Shepherd ruled Billy with constant hysterics" if things didn't go to suit her she would instantly go into a hysterical fit, and Billy, who was refined and craved peace at any price, would give her what she wanted."

DR. ALICE BARRY IS ON HER WAY TO ERIN

Dr. Alice Barry of Dublin, Ire., philanthropic physician among the poor of Ireland and an ardent worker for the Irish Republic, left Boston today for home, following a short stay as guest of Washington Bearse Council, American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic.

The Irish doctor came to America to attend the International Conference of Women Physicians at Washington. During her visit to Boston, she made a survey of Hub hospitals and baby clinics.

REGULATION OF HUDSON WATER POWER PLANNED

New York, May 18 (I.N.S.).—Plans for the regulation of waters of the Hudson River are being considered by State officials and representatives of paper companies, it was learned today.

Preliminary negotiations have been entered into with the Adirondack Power and Light Company for the purchase of water power.

Regulation would increase considerably the power available to the Union Bag and Paper Company which owns a hydro-electric plant at Hudson Falls.

NOTED BEAUTY HELD FOR DEATHS OF 34 PERSONS

Carlsbad, May 18. — Mrs. Julia Remiel, who is know for her beauty throughout Jugo-Slavia, has been arrested and is charged with being responsible for the deaths of:

One son.
Two husbands.
Thirty-one admirers.

Physicians say her case is pathologically unprecedented, but they believe her to be sane.

First With the News When It Is News

MEN may come and men may go, but THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN will continue to faithfully record their activities and present them to the world IN ADVANCE OF ITS COMPETITORS.

This is no idle boast, but a statement based on past performances made possible by an organization possessed of initiative, alertness and the most modern machinery for news gathering and dissemination.

Week in and week out, THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, true to its policy of "News When It Is News," leads the van.

The record of the past fortnight speaks for itself:

MAY 5.—The only evening paper to carry the announcement that rewards would be paid rum spies. Also the only paper to tell of the Red Sox baseball trade, by which Veach and Ferguson went to the Yankees for Francis.

MAY 6.—First with the story of the Melrose auto crash, in which one person was killed and two injured. The first Boston paper to tell of the cracking of Everett Scott, N. Y. Yankee shortstop, whose string of 1,307 consecutive games was broken.

MAY 8.—The only paper to announce the discovery of the chloroform bottle believed to have been used in connection with the death of Alexander Buchanan. Also the only evening paper to carry the story of Jesse Pomeroy's suit against Alice Stone Blackwell.

MAY 9.—The only paper to announce the murder of the Lexington farm foreman.

MAY 11.—First with the story of the shooting of a South End woman by a former Boston policeman.

MAY 12.—Only paper to announce the start of the grand jury probe of Revere's financial difficulties.

MAY 14.—First with the news of the acquittal on a larceny charge of Earl Woodward, kidnaper of Lucille Chatterton, Cinderella of the Mountains, at Middlebury Vt. Also first with the announcement of the verdicts in the Clan-na-Gael riots.

MAY 16.—First with the story of the $10,000 bribe offered Chief Finn of Chelsea as testified to by him at the Swampscott hearing. The same day THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN cerried the only story of the sudden death in Washington of General Nelson A. Miles.

"When did you first see Harry Brown?"

"In October, at Little's Point. He asked me if I would come down and help land some booze. I said 'Nothing doing.' He came down three or four days later, while I was talking with George Acker and discussed the same thing again.

$145 FOR ONE NIGHT.

"Brown said to Acker and me, 'Well, have you guys made up your minds? I have got everything fixed with the Swampscott farce.' He came down the next night with a woman in a flivver. Harry Brown and McDonald both talked with me that night. They told me if I didn't do what they said, I would lose my job.

"They said, 'If you squeal, we will shoot you.' We were scared to death and we said yes."

Marcia then testified to aiding in unloading liquor as directed on the Swampscott beach. He said he received $145 for one night's work and that on one occasion he counted 422 cases of liquor.

In November, he said, he saw several trucks come and go and 200 cases of liquor were shipped away and later seized in Chelsea.

3 MEN KILLED IN FEUD LAID TO BOOTLEGGING

Stamford, Ct., May 18 (A.P.).—Frank and Guiseppe Vartuli, brothers, were shot to death here and Paul Di Angelo was found dying from several stab wounds near the bodies of the Vartuli brothers. A revolver was found beside Di Angelo, who evidently had collapsed from loss of blood while trying to reach his automobile parked nearby. Knives were found on the bodies of each of the Vartuli brothers.

Di Anegio died before reaching a hospital. The authorities believe the triple tragedy possibly was the culmination of a bootleggers' feud. Police are seeking a fourth man, whose name is not disclosed.

QUIET SMOKE IN POWDER HOUSE LANDS 2 IN COURT

The two most badly frightened men who have been in Federal Court here for sundry moons were Michael Kane and Alfred Carter of East Weymouth, farmhands, whose offence consisted of picking out a powder house to have a Sunday afternoon smoke in! Officers of the Hingham naval station have had difficulty keeping smokers away from the magazines where TNT, smokeless powder and other high explosives are stored. They finally determined to prosecute all trespassers, and Kane and Carter were the first victims. Commissioner Kenney continued their cases for two months.

STATE ENTITLED TO $48,000 FROM PONZI

The State is entitled to an income tax and interest amounting to over $48,000, from Henry R. Cunningham, as trustee of the estate of Charles Ponzi, according to a ruling of Judge Brewster.

The ruling was the result of a petition of Assistant Attorney General Alfred R. Shrigley, filed in behalf of the commissioner of corporations, asking for the payment of the money as an income tax. The case was argued April 6.

MAN, 64, HANGS SELF IN CELL WITH SUSPENDERS

Oxford, May 18 (I.N.S.).—Clayton Whitaker, 64, of Charlton, committed suicide at the oxford jail early today by hanging himself with his suspenders to a bar of his cell.

Whitaker was arrested two weeks ago charged with attacking his brother, Dwight, eighty years old.

When arraigned in district court he was ordered to leave the state.

He returned Sunday to his brother's home and was arrested by state police after he had created a disturbance.

Whitaker was to have been arraigned in Webster Court today on a serious charge brought by a fourteen-year-old girl.

CITY GETS $250 MORE IN CONSCIENCE FUND

The City Conscience Fund was swelled by the sum of $250 when Treasurer John Curley found that amount in his mail today contributed by an unknown.

This anonymous gift is the second to arrive within a week, as the Treasurer found a check for $50 in the mail last Saturday. The conscience fund is now $550, received since the first of the year.

Back in Prison, Why?---By Donald Lowrie

Amazing Story of a Man's Struggle Against Temptations That Pulled Him Down to Die in a Cell

Lowrie's convulsive smack on Millicent's shoulder to kill an "ugly bug" which, in reality did not exist, was the gesture which revealed to Millicent that her guest was sadly demented.

Photo posed for the Boston American by Cora Frye and Paul Porter, now playing in Rose Marie at the Shubert Theatre.

Back in a felon's cell, after nearly fourteen years of freedom, a victim of his own weakness, and slowly dying of tuberculosis, Donald Lowrie describes the path of sin and shame he trod. Paroled to finish his great book, "My Life in Prison," he gained the confidence of governors and many high in civic and industrial life. But within a short time he was secretly drinking heavily and indulging in numerous intrigues with women. First he meets Estelle, a stranely untarnished girl of the waterfront district in Oakland. Then "Edith," a San Francisco society girl, seeks his company. He makes a lecture tour, and, returning, plunges into three days of drunken debauchery. Ruth, deserted by another ex-convict, holds his interest for a while. Hiram Johnson, then governor of California, calls on Lowrie to suggest needed prison reforms.

CHAPTER XXIV

I MUST have done some fast and clear thinking. Without an instant's hesitation my mind performed a triple somersault and landed on its mental feet.

"Ha, ha, Millicent!" I chuckled. "There wasn't any fox. I was just fooling you."

At the same time I was trying to evolve some good reason for abandoning the trip. It would never do for us to get deep into the gorge and there lose my grip as I did the night before. I might do something desperate. I might even assault my companion.

Even as the latter possibility occurred to me I had an awful temptation. Her lithe, graceful figure became that of the diaphanous girl I had so madly pursued a few hours before. I went on fire. Why not knock her in the head with a rock and drag her off by her hair, as the cave men used to do? Why all this respect and prolonged tomfoolery? She was a female, young, desirable and in my power. To subdue her against her will would be glorious. It would . . .

I pulled myself out of it in sudden horror. I shuddered.

Then, as I regarded Millicent in a tremendous revulsion of feeling, a craving to protect her, I was horrified to see a huge tarantula creeping up her back, about to go under the hanging coil of hair on her bare neck. It was hideously green and yellow and black. I leaped forward convulsively and struck her with the flat of my hand between her shoulders—struck the tarantula.

I must have struck harder than I knew, or else the blow caught Millicent stepping forward, for she was propelled two or three feet before she turned, alarm in her eyes.

"A spider—a tarantula!" I cried. "I got it just in time. Turn around—let me see."

She gave a little gasp and turned to me quickly.

I looked, expecting to see the smudge or remains where the tarantula had been. Instead, I saw at a glance that the brown khaki blouse was spotless. I was about to voice my astonishment when the sickening realization that I was again "seeing things" halted my tongue. I stood trembling; Millicent was facing me again, her breast rising and falling in agitation.

"Donald, there's something wrong with you today—what is it?" she exclaimed.

A yearning to tell Millicent everything and urge that we return came upon me, but I fought it down. I would be obliged to tell her of drinking to excess to account for delirium tremens, and I shrank from doing so.

"I'm awfully hungry," I finally mumbled. "Let's stop and have a bite of breakfast."

"Breakfast?" she queried. "Do you mean to say you've had no breakfast?"

Chance for a Little Sympathy Is Seen

"And nothing to eat last night, either." I added lugubriously, encouraged to get a full quota of sympathy from her by the concern in her voice. "I hadn't even finished my soup when . . ."

I stopped abruptly. I was floundering offshore and might get beyond my depth.

"When—what?" she asked. "But never mind," she added quickly, sensing my embarrassment. "If you're hungry you're hungry, and food is to eat and not to carry. But there is no water here—we can't make coffee, and the squabs are raw—I was going to broil them. I guess you'll have to eat bread and jam and an apple or two if you eat now."

"Sounds like a whole banquet to me," I laughed nervously, swinging the knapsack to the ground and unstrapping it.

I looked up just as Millicent was gathering her legs together criss-

'DIVORCE MILL' PAIR HELD IN $50,000

New Bones Strengthen Theory Skeleton Is Slain Wife

HEAVY BAIL IN 'DIVORCE MILL' CASE

Providence Lawyers Plead Not Guilty; Boston Couples Reported Involved

Providence, May 18.—While the Grand Jury ground out relentless facts in a probe of an alleged far-flung divorce mill, Leonard W. Horton, master in chancery, and Francis P. Dougherty, well-known divorce lawyer, were being arraigned in Sixth District Court today.

The men, who are law partners, are charged with being the leaders in the elaborate "divorce mill" conducted, it is alleged, for the benefit of Boston, New York, and other out-of-town residents.

Before Judge Gorham the men pleaded not guilty to specific charges of conspiracy and forgery, but Judge Gorham caused a ripple of surprise as he announced, when he set bail of $50,000 for each man.

The case was continued to May 26, by which time a grand jury report is expected. Unable to raise the bail, the two alleged divorce leaders were remanded back into custody.

More than 400 persons, including principals in divorce cases and their counsel, are understood to be involved in the grand jury investigation.

A goodly share of those who were granted the divorce decrees, obtained them by forged deposition and false statements, are among the most prominent people of the country. With these decrees vacated, their marriages will become illegal and they themselves will be liable to prosecution.

Horton, familiarly known as "Judge," and who poses as a retired Rhode Island jurist, was arrested Saturday by Providence police inspectors. He was held in $50,000 for a hearing.

Francis P. Dougherty, a well known, local divorce lawyer and associate of Horton, was arrested at the same time and held in the same amount. They are charged with obtaining fraudulent divorce decrees by means of forged depositions and false statements, particularly as to the necessary two years' residence Rhode Island courts require for those seeking divorce.

Both Horton and Dougherty since their arrest, have been locked up in police headquarters here, unable to obtain $50,000 apiece.

The revelations follow the exposure of a group which was converting Rhode Island courts into easy places for persons of prominence and wealth to secure divorce without legal foundations.

Among many who have sought divorce here are: Nina Wilcox Putnam, author; Mrs. Minta E. Durfee Arbuckle, wife of the screen comedian, Fatty Arbuckle, and Fay Mansell Eisenberg of the Hotel Belleclaire, New York, a famous mediate.

All of the petitioners named withdrew their suits after they had been threatened with imprisonment by the authorities for fraud and because the Grand Jury, gave them the benefit of the doubt as to their intent to defraud.

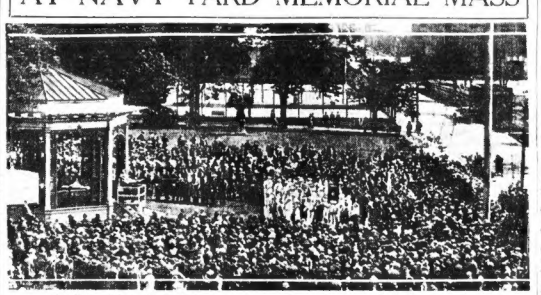
Following the arrest of Horton and Dougherty, Mrs. Louise Nahigian Notarangelo, a young matron and mother, who formerly worked in Dougherty's office as stenographer, was taken into custody. She was allowed to go on her own recognizance by Judge Capotosto, "because of your home surroundings and because we believe you are ready to do what is right," he told her.

She will be examined on stenographic notes she made in 100 divorces while working for Dougherty.

Manuel George Randa, an employe of Dougherty, was also arrested and held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury today as a material witness. Unable to raise bail he is in jail.

Sumptuous offices were maintained by the divorce mill in New York, according to Atty. Gen. Sisson.

AT NAVY YARD MEMORIAL MASS



Rt. Rev. Michael J. Splain preached the sermon at the annual memorial service and mass at the Charlestown Navy Yard for members of the United States armed forces, who lost their lives during the World War. Rev. George P. O'Connor was celebrant of the mass. The altar was erected in the bandstand. Five thousand persons, including army, navy and civic officials, attended the ceremonies. "Taps" were sounded by buglers and a volley fired by a squad of marines.

GROVER FLAYED BY LAWYER IN ENDING CASE

After weeks of sensational testimony and days of vigorous and heated argument, the Grover libel case reached an end today.

Shortly before noon Michael L. Sullivan, counsel for Mrs. Lyndon W. Grover, concluded his argument. Judge Harry R. Low of the Essex Probate Court, sitting in Salem, took the case.

Mrs. Grover, formerly an actress, is suing her husband for separate maintenance.

Mr. Grover, who has been a shoe manufacturer in Lynn and who is said by his wife to be wealthy, is suing for absolute divorce. He named as correspondent "Count" Paul A. Monte of Winthrop.

MUST PAY HER LAWYER

Judge Low said he would not set a time limit on his deliberations. In the meantime, tomorrow morning, he will hear the lawyers in the case as to counsel fees of Mrs. Grover's attorneys. Although Grover's lawyer said in his argument last week that his client was "broke," the latter must pay for his wife's lawyers.

Mr. Sullivan in his closing argument said: "The high spots in the testimony were furnished by Tyrrell, the Cape Cod farm hand; by Grover and by Soury, the chauffeur.

"Where was Mrs. Tyrrell? Wasn't a woman be more likely to know what the Grover women folks were doing at Cape Cod at the time referred?

LAWYER FLAYS GROVER

"As to Mr. Grover's son, I ask you to take his appearance on the stand into consideration.

"Remember, he appeared animated by hostility toward Mrs. Grover, who had telephoned the uncle complaining of his actions.

"Grover beat, clapped and damned his wife. Then, in December, he seems to have felt he had gone too far. So he sat at the table and broke bread with Chief Monte, whom he names as correspondent.

"Elsewhere there are signs and little incidents that break down more now that his wife was unfaithful with this so-called 'Count.'"

Mr. Sullivan concluded that Grover was a man of means. The suit for divorce should be dismissed, and he should be compelled to support his estranged wife in the manner becoming to her position.

$750,000 FIRE WIPES OUT BIG TANNING PLANT

Olean, N. Y., May 18.—Fire today destroyed the plant of the Empire tanning Company here with an estimated loss of $750,000. Twelve buildings, occupying more than five acres of land, were razed.

THUG AT BACK BAY HOTEL FOILED BY CLERK'S YELLS

George Hill of No. 406 Commercial street, East Braintree, night clerk at the Hotel Hemenway, Westland avenue, was held up today by a thug who brandished a gun in his face and demanded the hotel's cash. Hill dropped behind the desk and yelled for help. The thug fled and Hill notified Back Bay police station which sent officers who searched the fens and vacant lots for several hours. Hill describes the thug as about 25, a little over 5 feet tall, light complexion, thin face, wearing a grey hat, dark overcoat over a blue shirt and brown overalls and no necktie.

POLICE SERGEANT WRIGHT OF DORCHESTER IS DEAD

Sergeant James P. Wright, of Station 11, Fields Corner, a member of the Boston Police Department since August, 1887, died at his home in Dorchester today of heart disease. Sergeant Wright was appointed to serve patrolman in August, 1887, he was assigned to the Dedham street station where he worked as a patrolman with Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley.

He was later a sergeant at Station 11 and 13.

CALL HUB DETECTIVES; TOOTH IS FOUND

Charlestown, N. H., May 18.—Finding of a rotten finger and toe bones and one more tooth, today convinced High Sheriff Alfred L. Barton that the skeleton dug up on the Alfred Eaton farm is that of Mrs. Blanche Whitney of Langdon.

And more sinister are the further findings which, in addition to adding to the gruesomeness of the case, add to the mystery that surrounds it. Not only are there indications of cruelty, determination of mental suffering apparently clinched the belief of the authorities that the woman was murdered and buried here.

Today's sifting finds in the mystery which has gripped this section, came as Boston detectives called into the case, went on their way North from the Hub to aid in solving the mystery of the skeleton.

FINDING MISSING TOOTH

With fine sieves and painstaking minuteness, Sheriff Barton and Deputy Sheriff James W. Davidson went over every handful of earth in the vicinity of the spot where the skeleton was turned by a plow.

Their efforts were rewarded by the finding of bones missing from the fingers and hands and of one more tooth, the last one needed to complete the set as worn by Mrs. Whitney. According to friends, she had two upper teeth missing, and with today's find, just two gaps exist in the whitened jaws of the skull.

Most excitement was also occasioned by announcements that a gravestone, bearing the date 1767, was found on the Eaton farm. This proved unfounded, however, the gravestone being found five miles away and in use as a "stepping stone" over a highway gulley.

BELIEF IS DRAGGED

Another exciting development in the strange case today was the act of Attorney General Jeremy Wat-

Pickwick, Winkle, Snodgrass, Will Be Here Wednesday

Boston of 1860 Will Rise Again For Pageant of Woman's Municipal League

Betty Alden

SAMUEL PICKWICK, THE HONORABLE English gentlemen as Dickens created him, Winkle, Snodgrass and Tupman, his merry and talkative companions, the Fat Boy and Mr. Wardle, Governor Andrews and other personages of Boston in the quiet and leisurely year of 1860, will appear on Beacon Hill on Wednesday next.

IN FAT, BOSTON of Sixty Years Ago will parade before the eyes of today's Boston in the much anticipated and bountifully arranged pageant of the Women's Municipal League as actors and participants take possession of the old Hill which has been sung in song and story.

THE PICKWICK PARTY — staged by the Boston Dickens Fellowship—will be so very true to tradition that Charles Dickens would rub his eyes in amazement could he but appear on the Hill to view his famous characters.

OUR GRANDMOTHERS tell us that everyone was reading Dickens in Boston during the Sixties. Henry M. Hight is to do the character of the Honorable Samuel, and other Pickwickians are in the hands of Fellowship members who will portray them with absolute accuracy and detail.

THE FAT BOY will open the door to visitors at the Robert Treat Paine Joy street mansion and Mr. Wardle will play the host. All this belongs to the house party to be given as part and parcel of the pageant.

JUST DOWN the Hill a short way, at the Club of Odd Volumes, that unusual one story building which always excites so much comment and speculation by strangers in the city, Mrs. Theodore G. Bremer and Mrs. Ernest Lovering will head a group of tea servers.

IT WILL BE JUST the spot to drop into for a cheery cup between the parades. During these, of course, every vantage spot will be occupied for the Leaguers have rounded up a vast deal of interesting exhibits to delight the spectators.

OLD STAGE AND WOMAN IN AIR HERALD FETE

Through an old-time stage coach and a more modern airplane, the public of Boston was told today of the historical fete to be given on Beacon Hill next Wednesday in revival of the days of three-quarters of a century ago.

Skimming over Boston, high up under the ceiling of the blue sky, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, prominent member of the Women's Municipal League, sponsor of the fete, directed from an airplane literature descriptive of the celebration.

She rode with Pilot Leighton and they took off from the East Boston Airport promptly on the stroke of noon.

At the same time, an old-day stage coach, accompanied by a band and gay outriders, left the home of Mrs. William H. Goodwin, No. 150 Commonwealth avenue, and toured Boston streets for the same purpose.

THERE WILL BE old hand tubs and their red-shirted attending fire brigades, old flags and colors borne by descendants of Civil War veterans, Uncle Sam with his queer top hat and long-tailed coat, a fife and drum corps, and old equipages that rolled sedately about the Hill in olden days.

PERHAPS THE most noteworthy affair will be the Lyman coach. Outsiders and coachman in costumes, and a bridal party on its way to church will ride out, just as brides of the Lyman, Brooks and Saltonstall families did years ago.

AN AUTHENTIC old bakery cart, selling home-cooked foods, cakes, cookies and pies, comes at the end of the procession. Two thirty is the hour for the first appearance Mount Vernon and Walnut streets the starting point.

IT THEN PASSES down the Hill and through the quiet reaches of old Louisburg square. Again at four in the afternoon it wends its way about the cross streets and thoroughfares.

ALL AFTERNOON the booths selling out a great variety of articles will be a centre of teeming industry. The whole town has been ransacked for things to appeal to every purse, and attractions have been imported to augment the native supply.

MISS FRANCES GOODWIN, fiancee of Francis Cummings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings who occupy the Paine mansion in Joy street, drives the bakery cart.

THE SILHOUETTE booth is directed by Mrs. Walter H. Kilham and her daughter. Miss Jeannette Kilham; Mrs. Jasper Whiting runs a bank, Miss Janet Bartol has the grabs, Mrs. Barrett Andrews and a coterie will sell cigarettes, Miss Ruth Thayer presides over the vegetable booth and Miss Eleanor Jackson sells programs.

LAST YEAR the programs, with a splendid history of the famous Hill mansions (opened for the benefit of the Municipal League) were like the proverbial hot cakes. They made a splendid souvenir. This year a large supply will be on hand, one for every one who wishes to own one.

AS QUITE EVERY one who follows the splendid work of the Municipal League well knows, Mrs. William H. Goodwin is at the head of the multiple activities of the Beacon Hill Fete Day.

MRS. ROBERT TREAT PAINE, 2d., Mrs. Ronald Lyman, Mrs. Barrett Andrews, Mrs. Frank A. Bourne, Mrs. Everett Morss, Mrs. Stephen S. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Henry D. Tudor and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine have one or another line of endeavor in hand.

'KISS ME AGAIN' IS SMART FILM AT FENWAY

In the interest of truth it must be told at the outset that, in the relation of its title to the amorous sentiment of the popular song of the same name, the film "Kiss Me Again," which opened at the Fenway Saturday for its week's showing, has, like the flowers that bloom in the Spring, nothing to do with the case. The film is not "adapted" from the song.

"Kiss Me Again" is farce comedy of a quality seldom seen on the screen and the Paris locale provides the right background for its smart sophistication. It is an Ernst Lubitsch production co-starring the increasingly capable comedy team Monte Blue and Marie Prevost, ably supported by the short cast of Clara Bow, John Roche and Willard Louis.

Monte Blue as the young husband finds himself up against the none too easy task of squaring the eternal triangle, when he discovers that his pretty wife (Marie Prevost) has fallen hard for the somewhat effeminate charms of a temperamental musician (John Roche). Instead of lying him posthaste to the divorce court, friend husband completely crosses up the opposition by his grandiloquent offer of a substantial sum and freedom of the house while he moves out to a hotel.

Such unlooked for generosity and apparent indifference on the part of her spouse naturally piques the erring wife and serves as a boomerang to shatter her new found romance. Of course there is "another woman" who, with her requisite amount of French "verve," or whatever it is, further involves the situation. But then, her relations with our hero prove to be perfectly proper; wife begs forgiveness, husband "comes home," exit the music-master and once again all's right with the world.

A Walter Hiers comedy, short subjects and a special musical presentation complete the bill.

HELD BY FEAR IN PATH OF AUTO FIRE TRUCK

Everett Woman Is Knocked Down and Injured; a Policeman's Record Dash Is Late

Paralyzed by fear, Mrs. Viola Sowle, 22 years old, of 976 Broadway avenue, Everett, was unable to get out of the path of a piece of fire apparatus at Broadway and Norwood street, that city, with the result that she is in the Massachusetts General Hospital. She was knocked down by a ladder truck and sustained a broken leg.

According to the police, Mrs. Sowle saw the approaching truck but was unable to move. Patrolman John A. Brock, who was nearby, shouted a warning and started to her assistance, but arrived too late.

Hit by Fire Truck

Mrs. Viola Sowle of Everett was so confused she was unable to get out of the path of the speeding apparatus. Her leg was broken.

REVEALS RUSES OF RUM BOATS AS 'FISHERS'

They Lure Coast Guardsmen to Be Crippled by Nets

Freeport, N. Y., May 18 (A.P.)—Ruses employed by "bottle fishermen" in their attempts to keep their powerfully-engined, liquor laden speed boats out of the hands of the United States Coast Guard were made known with the recent inspection of the Mid-Atlantic rum smuggling area.

With their intimate knowledge of every bit of water in the lagoons and inlets leading up to and about Freeport and of Great South Bay into which the inlets lead, the rum runners, steering fly-capping courses, often in the darkness scoot about one of the great fishermen's nets with which the bay is literally filled. On many occasions a pursuing boat, its crew unaware of the great net's existence, has plunged into the tangle and emerged, with propeller blades shorn, only after the speeding runner has lost himself in the intricacies of the inlets.

RIVETER BADLY HURT WHEN MACHINE SLIPS

Gray Ken, thirty-two-year-old mechanic of No. 53 Port avenue, Boston, while working in the New Haven shops at the Dover street yards today, was possibly fatally injured when struck on the head by a piece of iron.

Ken was riveting, and his machine slipped, throwing the iron into the air. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he was found to have sustained concussion of the brain and a badly lacerated forehead. His name was placed on the danger list.

FIRE TRUCK WRECKED ON SOUTH BOSTON SIDEWALK

Fire Truck No. 43, while responding to an alarm in South Boston, was badly smashed when the driver, attempting to turn the corner at D street and Broadway, took too sharp a turn in trying to avoid hitting a passing truck and ran the apparatus onto the sidewalk. The truck overturned in the middle of the walk, narrowly missing a nearby store window. The operator jumped just before the truck overturned. Several pedestrians had narrow escapes.

Risks Own Life for Horse; Gets Hero Medal

A lamplighter's humanity and heroism won reward today when the humane medal of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was awarded George Little, No. 127 Oakland street, Malden.

The medal was presented by Dr. Francis Rowley, president of the society.

Disregarding his own danger, Little cut the traces and dragged his horse away just as the tank exploded.

Mrs. Mary Madeiros, mother of Celestino Madeiros, of New Bedford, on trial for first-degree murder in connection with the death of James E. Carpenter, Wrentham National Bank cashier, who was shot and killed in an attempted holdup, caused another sensation in the Norfolk Superior Court, Dedham, today when she fainted as Judge Henry T. Lummus began his charge to the jury. It was the second time Mrs. Madeiros has fainted during the trial. Attorney Francis J. Squires, counsel for the defense, revived the ease 53 minutes. District Attorney Wilbur, for the prosecution, revived 30 minutes.

J. Foster Stearns, son of Frank W. Stearns, President Coolidge's closest friend, has been appointed librarian at Holy Cross College, Worcester, effective in the Fall of 1926, after a year in Europe. Mr. Stearns is a native of Hull, a graduate of Amherst College and a veteran of the World War. He was ordained to the Episcopal ministry in 1905, but was received into the Catholic Church in 1911. He has served as librarian of the New York Library, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the State House Library. He was made a secretary of Embassies in the United States State Department by President Wilson in 1920 and served in Constantinople and Paris.

BRITAIN ACTS TO KILL THIRD INTERNATIONAL

Will Propose Sending Note to Soviet Demanding Repudiation of Communists

London, May 18 (Universal Cable)—The Daily Herald publishes a Berlin dispatch, dated Sunday, which declares:

"I learn on absolutely reliable authority that the British government has proposed to the allies the sending of a joint note to the Soviet government demanding the absolute repudiation of the Communist International and the expulsion of its headquarters from Moscow."

While insurgents numbering 60,000 under General Bozovsky are reported to be in possession of a large area of the Minsk region, western Russia.

The dispatch said that the revolutionary movement against Soviet Russia is serious and is growing, entailing serious damage.

Cowboy Star Halts Bolting Circus Horses; 8 Hurt

Albany, N. Y., May 18 (A.P.)—A circus parade provided extra thrills today when six horses drawing a circus wagon ran away. Six Cheyenne Indian squaws and two cowboys were injured and lives of hundreds of spectators endangered.

The horses were stopped by the circus' star cowboy after running several blocks. In halting the runaways his own horse fell and he was thrown under its hoofs, suffering a broken ankle. At the hospital he gave his name as Mexican Joe. One of the squaws was also taken to the hospital.

$50,000 FIRE SWEEPS MAINE POSTOFFICE

Departments of Two Cities Called to Fight Union Blaze

Union, Me., May 18—Rockland and Belmont firemen early today checked with a $50,000 loss a fire that threatened the business section of this town.

The Masonic block, owned by C. A. Robinson, and which contained the postoffice, Masonic Hall, confectionery store of Royal Grinnell and residence of Elisabeth Hill, was almost wiped out, the top floor of which was Masonic property alone.

The building occupied by Ralph Young as an ice cream parlor was destroyed.

"Keep the Velvet"

Socony Motor Oil literally cushions all the moving parts of the motor in a film of velvet-like consistency. More than this, it seals the combustion chamber so effectively that the maximum power of the explosive mixture is delivered in full, and, in addition, resists to a high degree excessive engine temperatures. All these factors make for longer motor life, greater power, minimum repair bills.

Fill up on Socony Motor Oil. Note the difference in costs—the cost of actual operation and the lessened repair bills. In fact, any way you wish to reckon it, use Socony and "Keep the Velvet!"

Insist upon Socony Motor Oil; resist cheap and spurious imitations.

Chassis Lubrication
Do not fail to lubricate periodically your chassis with Socony Gear Oil or Socony Gear Compound. It gives miles of added power.

GEORGE L. WARE LOSES LICENSE AS BROKER

Commission Says He Is, or Has Been, Trying to Evade Law

George L. Ware's brokerage license was revoked today by the Department of Public Utilities.

The speculator, speculator and promoter, best remembered through his connection with the Old Colony and subsidiary railroads, has been in difficulties with the commission for months.

On February 18, he was ordered to produce certain documents for the commission's inspection. He was to have the documents in by February 28. He obtained an extension to March 7. On March 14, he was notified he was to be given a hearing on March 25.

The finding of the commission ends as follows:

"Therefore, it occurring to the commission that said George L. Ware is or has been conducting business in a fraudulent manner, or is or has been wilfully evading and seeking to nullify the provisions of said Act, (Sale of securities) and due notice having been sent to the registree, his registration is hereby ordered revoked, and is revoked."

Some years ago, when the Mutual Divide war was on, Ware and the late Thomas Lawson nearly came to blows in the Federal Building.

Bootlegs Liquor in Worcester Police Cell

Worcester, May 18 (A.P.)—Patrick F. Degnan was arrested today in the cellroom at police headquarters by an officer, who says he caught Degnan in the act of selling liquor in half-pint bottles to the prisoners.

The prisoner, who was locked up on a charge of transporting liquor illegally, and illegally selling liquor, had been admitted to the cellroom on the pretence of visiting a cousin.

BOOTLEGGERS BRIBE COAST GUARDSMEN

New York, May 18 (I.N.S.)—A group of bootleggers, using bribery and strike propaganda to further their efforts, are endeavoring to break down the morale of enlisted men o nthe coast guard boats looking Rum Row, it was stated today by Captain W. E. Vickery, commandant of th ecoast guard in the New York area.

Captain Jacobs in admitting that there were sixteen coast guardsmen locked up in the Richmond county jail, Staten Island, some for liquor smuggling and desertion, said:

"When a man getting $125 or less a month fro mthe government is offered $250 a week by rum runners the temptation is very great."

Drill Wall, Steal $10,000

New York, May 18 (A.P.)—Robbers today dug through a brick wall into Brill Brothers' store at 49th street and Broadway, blew open the safe and escaped with from $5,000,000 to $10,000. A compartment of the safe containing $2,500 was not disturbed.

REVERE GIRLS TO PRESENT COMEDY

"She Must Marry a Doctor" Is to Be Given on May 26

"She Must Marry a Doctor," a hatrical comedy of old-fashioned ideas about marriage in which title and honors and a matchmaker play important parts, will be presented by the Kadeemah Girls of Revere on May 26. Miss Edna Sandler, Boston elocutionist and dramatic coach, will be the director.

A Jewish comedy, typical of the old school from the pen of the famous Sholom Aah, "She Must Marry a Doctor," depicts a matrimonial agent whose greatest asset is "a man for every girl's taste. The wifes of these experts who attempt to effect a union between girl and boy are extremely funny.

Other features will include novelty dances, pantomimes and vaudeville sketches, which the smaller children will present. Miss Laurette La Rotte has will be chairman and a specialty and singing act under Miss Sandler's direction. Dancing will follow the performance.

The New England Zionist Convention will be in Springfield June 13 and 14. Announcement comes from Elihu D. Stone, president of the New England Region, that several hundred delegates representing every part of the Jewry of the six States will participate in this expression of Zionism and Palestine.

The sessions will be at the Kimball Hotel. A reception on Saturday night will open the convention, followed by business meetings on the next day. The convention committee of the Springfield unit of the district headed by Louis C. Henin is in charge of arrangements.

Important reports of organization work, various phases of activities, impressions of visitors who were in Palestine in the past year from Boston and other cities, an educational program for the year 1926; the question of the Hebrew University in Palestine, resolutions and other matters of the Springfield Zionist district will be discussed at this convention.

The first district to elect delegates to the convention is the Roxbury unit which will send Isaac Glaser, H. I. Morrison, J. B. Abrams, J. Rabinovitz, M. E. Parsons and J. Cohen. The alternates are A. S. Kubitsky, J. Goldstein, B. E. Levine, Louis Rosenblatt, Morris Lichter and S. Black.

Elihu D. Stone and Benjamin Rabalsky on a recent visit to Waltham in the interest of a community building there made possible the organization of a Zionist district. Although the community is actively engaged in soliciting funds for the community building, through the efforts of the New England Regional Zionist executives seventeen members immediately were enrolled. C. Mendelsohn and Max Krinsky of Waltham have promised to form a Zionist unit there.

The question whether or not a congregation has the legal right to change its character from orthodox to conservative-reform as aroused by the religious controversy existing in Cleveland is being keenly considered by the Union of Orthodox Congregations of America of which Rabbi Herbert Goldstein is president. The noted New York rabbi will leave for Cleveland within a few days to discuss the difference of opinion with Rabbi Solomon Goldman of the Cleveland congregation responsible for the question and Mr. Rahmman, president of the Jewish Welfare Center of that city. According to the latter two, the declaration that they are to change their congregation is untrue. Therefore the president of the Union will leave for Cleveland to ascertain the validity of such a denial personally.

Captain N. Taylor Phillips, through the Union, is advising as to the legality of the procedure of the members of the committee of 200, headed by Abraham A. Kaye of Cleveland who are alleged to be the instigators and perpetrators of the change of religious character.

HOW I USE MAZOLA

Many Uses For This Convenient Cooking Oil

Now that our Pie Contest is over and the thousands of recipes entered by members of the WNAC American Women's Club are in the hands of the judging committee, it is perfectly all right for me to divulge a pie secret, and that is, that Mazola is a great help in making light flaky pie crust, and it is also a great time-saver as well. I really believe that once you try Mazola in your pie making you will make it a regular habit.

All that is necessary to do is to beat your Mazola and water thoroughly together and add it to your sifted dry ingredients. Then you mix the dough together lightly with a fork and toss it on a slightly floured board and roll it to the desired thickness. You will only need from 2-3 to ¾ as much Mazola as you would use of other shortening in making your pies, and if you will add a little lemon juice or a small amount of baking powder to your dough, your pastry will be flakier and more easily digested.

Use the proportions of 3 cups of sifted pastry flour to ¾ of a cup of Mazola and ½ of a teaspoon of salt, ¼ cup ice water and ½ teaspoon of baking powder for your pie crust.

I wish I had room here to tell you of all the ways that I use Mazola. I keep a screw-top bottle filled with the oil on a shelf right over my gas range and it is always ready for deep fat frying, for sauteing, cake making, rolls or pies.

The surprising thing to me is how little oil disappears when I use it for deep fat frying, and the beauty of it is I can strain the Mazola right back into my bottle and use it again.

I still have a supply of the attractive Mazola Recipe Booklets which I will be glad to send you if you will drop me a line.

WHAT DUZ IS DOING

A Real Labor Saver

From the letters of inquiry about Duz that I have answered and from the samples and coupons that I have mailed out, it seems to me that every woman in New England knows about this wonderful time and labor saver that has come to bless our homes.

However, if there are any of you who haven't yet tried Duz, do drop me a line and let me send you a sample package so that you can share in the help that your sister housewives are receiving from this wonderful new soap product.

Dissolved in luke-warm water, Duz produces wonderful suds full of natural pure oxygen which will take out all stains and yellowness from your clothes, even fruit and ink stains—everything, in fact, except rust. Of course, the most stubborn stains may need to be soaked twice and to have some of the powder rubbed right on them, but they will finally disappear without any injury to the fabric.

What I specially bless Duz for is what it does for my dish towels. You know in an apartment it is practically impossible to bleach these in the sunlight and they soon get gray and sad looking under ordinary washing.

However, if you will put your dish cloths and towels to soak each night in a bowl full of Duz solution and then rinse them thoroughly, you will find that even in the darkest kitchenette they will dry beautifully white and clean. And for your family laundry, whether you wash by machine or hand, or for the "wash bowl laundry," which is so necessary for one's bestest personal belongings, you will find Duz a real helper to you.

DUZ washes out stains and yellowness

A NEW SPREAD FOR BREAD

Delicious and Economical

One of our club members recently wrote me: "I think I would try Rough-On-Rats if you advised it, but somehow I can't seem to get my family to use anything but butter on their bread for a spread."

I think this is a problem we all have and yet it is too bad for us to be cut off from products that are real money-savers. Let me tell you how one of our members met this problem. She wanted to use Spredit, knowing it to be wholesome and very economical. She bought a pound, mixed the coloring in carefully (and it only takes a minute), put it on the ice and served it in place of the usual butter for dinner. There were hot cream-of-tarter biscuits and the family fell to with gusto and second servings of Spredit were in order—and not a single one had the slightest suspicion they were eating anything but the best creamery butter.

Wouldn't it be a satisfaction to you to use this pure, harmless product for a month without broadcasting it and then confess your crime to the family and also show them the actual savings in dollars and cents—maybe buy some attractive bit of china from the proceeds, which would be visible evidence to them of your thrift.

You know, it wasn't so many years ago that the average housewife didn't think evaporated milk was fit for cooking, but today millions of cans are used. And think of how we would have laughed a few years ago at the mere suggestion of eating yeast cakes to improve our health! But nowadays millions of people are doing it and many millions more are eating raisins for the iron they contain.

Don't let public prejudice prevent you from serving Spredit on your butter plates, or from using it in your everyday cooking, in bread and cake and pies and salad dressing, in gingerbread and on baked potatoes. It truly does "make good food taste better." And best of all, Spredit will save many pennies for you.

LINEN NEWS FROM THE SHEPARD STORES

Every woman's heart thrills at the sight of beautiful linens, especially if those linens are among her own home treasures.

The Shepard Stores tell me that the ultra modern young woman is as susceptible to it's charms as her mother or her grandmother, and it is not an exceptional case in which this store has served three generations, for this is their sixtieth year of prominence as a splendid place to buy linens.

Always, the charm of hand woven Irish linen damask is unsurpassed by any dictate of the moment, but even this is somewhat affected by changes in living conditions. The bride of twenty-five or thirty years ago would not have thought of omitting from her trousseau a "Banquet Cloth" of "Fleur de Lis" or other hand woven patterns imported from Ireland. Today the two by two yard cloth or the two by two and one-half yard cloth is usually preferred, but it must still be of that superb quality, with napkins to match.

So far she follows tradition. Then, having in mind the cosy breakfast nook and the gateleg table that will probably take the place of dining-room in her first home—a small apartment—she is inspired by the colorful hemstitched damask sets that are so decidedly new. She'll want many of these—a fifty-eight inch square bordered in blue or gold perhaps with hemstitched napkin bordered to match, a set of natural damask in lilly of the valley or chrysanthemum pattern with a larger cloth, 66 inches square and twenty-inch matching napkins. Then there's the solid color sets of damask, salmon bordered in hello; gold color bordered in hello, grey, bordered in blue—the very smartest of breakfast sets. The cloth is 59 inches square and there are six matching napkins, all hemstitched.

If she's very tactful she chooses an inexpensive set or two of white Irish linen damask to impress a conservative mother-in-law—a two by two cloth at $6.50, perhaps with napkins to match at $8.50 a dozen or sofia Irish linen damask by the yard with napkins to match.

PERSHING FOR SENATE UP TO GOVERNOR

Missouri Executive to Fill Vacancy Caused by Death of Spencer

Washington, May 18.—Selection of General Pershing to succeed to the Senate seat left vacant by the sudden death of Selden P. Spencer of Missouri will be urged strongly upon Governor Baker of that State, it developed here today.

Prominent Republicans from Missouri came to Washington some weeks ago with the proposal that the general become a candidate for the Senate and even sought the aid of President Coolidge.

The situation with reference to the General's candidacy is somewhat complicated by the fact that he has just accepted appointment by President Coolidge as the American member of the Plebiscitary Commission to settle the Tacna-Arica controversy between Peru and Chile.

If appointed to fill the Spencer vacancy, he might have to give up his present post. On the other hand, if Governor Baker should appoint someone else, that person undoubtedly would seek nomination and election and thus injure the General's prospects.

Under the Missouri law, Governor Baker, a Republican, is authorized to fill the vacancy left by Senator Spencer's death. The man thus appointed will hold office until the election in 1926.

NURSE ESCAPES DEATH ON ICE FLOE IN ARCTIC

Carried to Sea in Freezing Temperature on Return From Errand of Mercy

Nome, Alaska, May 18 (A.P.)—After narrowly escaping being carried to sea on a cake of ice, while mushing around Cape Thompson, far within the Arctic Circle on the north coast of Alaska and experiencing other harrowing adventures on an expedition of Mercy, Mrs. G. O. Brady, government nurse, has returned safely to Kotzebue Sound, a dispatch relates.

Mrs. Brady started north, March 27 from Kotzebue with Superintendent Chase to give medical attention in native villages and schools. Three hours after the departure Chance and Mrs. Brady were overtaken by a blizzard and were forced to take refuge in a native cabin at the mouth of the Noatak River after fourteen hours of blind driving in a temperature of 30 below zero.

When the storm subsided they continued to Point Hope, 800 miles north of Kotzebue Sound.

On the return trip, Mrs. Brady was accompanied only by a native musher, as Superintendent Chance had preceded her. High winds wrenched free ice cakes upon which Mrs. Brady and her guide were rounding Cape Thomson, and carried them seaward for more than a mile before a reef stopped them and they could make their way ashore.

Old timers described the trail from Point Hope the most dangerous in the Northland.

FULLER AND FUSILIERS IN 1775 CELEBRATION

New Haven, Ct., May 18 (A.P.)—An historic event, the departure in 1775 of the Second Company, Governor's Foot Guard, for Cambridge to join the Continental Army, is being celebrated here today. The first of the historic military organizations to arrive was the Fusilier Veteran Battalion of Boston, with Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts and his staff. Among the last to arrive was the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, accompanied by Governor E. Lee Trinkle of Virginia and his staff.

During the parade the ancient ceremony of demanding the keys to the powder house was enacted, Major Edward A. Judge, commander of the Foot Guard, took the part of Benedict Arnold, commander of the original company of Foot Guards.

LOWRIE TELLS WHY HE'S BACK IN PRISON

Amazing Story of a Man's Struggle Against Temptation That Failed

cross after seating herself on the ground, and to my horror saw a huge rattlesnake coiled close beside her, ready to strike.

The cry that I started to utter caught in my throat and I made a gurgling sound. I had realized that the snake wasn't real and that a few more such alarms as that would convince Millicent that she was out for a Sunday picnic with a raving maniac. But suppose the snake were real, and I kept still?

My mind went boiling. I had suppressed the cry, but the gurgle and my staring eyes frightened Millicent anyway. She sprang to her feet as if to flee, a look of fear in her blue eyes.

"Donald, what is the matter? You're queer! You're not yourself. You—you frighten me. Please tell me, are you all right?"

Before I realized it, the whole miserable story was pouring from my lips like a cataract, and at the end I warned her that we had better turn back before I became dangerous and violent.

Millicent had taken both my hands during the recital, and when I finished she stood with bowed head, silent. When she raised her eyes to mine they were full of sorrow, and I imagined I detected hopelessness. She gazed at me a long time before she spoke, her voice soothing and calm.

"Two minds are stronger than one, Donald. You must win, and I'll help you. I'm not afraid. It isn't in you to harm me, no matter what happens. The outdoors and the sun will help you. So will companionship.

"I—I couldn't bear to have you go off alone—suffer alone. I'll stay with you. Let's eat something and then hurry to the falls."

The hours that followed were replete with terrorism. Having a companion with me who knew what was happening helped me. There were many places on the trail where a single misstep meant disaster, even death.

One place in particular makes me shudder every time I think of it even to this day. It was a forty-five degree landslide of loose earth and shale ending in a sheer precipice with the jagged rocks of the gorge bed a hundred feet below.

The trail detoured there, but by cutting across the slide one saved half a mile. Millicent and I had essayed that hazardous feat one Sunday, climbing to roots and low brush along the upper edge. A root had given way in Millicent's hand, precipitating her downward. With admirable presence of mind she had thrown herself flat and spread out, digging her fingers and toes in the sliding mass. She slid several feet before she stopped, and lay there, face downward, not daring to move. She was just beyond my reach.

The situation looked hopeless, for I had no rope. Finally, by pulling hard, I established that a large tree root would hold, and I let myself slide slowly down toward her until she could reach and grasp my ankle. It was a nerve sapping ordeal. Slowly, using my legs and garments for hand holds, Millicent climbed up and over me until she could reach the root to which I was clinging.

A few seconds later we were cautiously proceeding across the remainder of the slide. It was trembling violently and dripping with perspiration. She as a perfectly cool. I concluded that either she had not realized how close to death she had been or else she was the nerviest girl I had ever known. Subsequent adventures proved the latter estimate the right one.

Voice of George Pounds in Ear

We, of course, skirted the landslide when we got to it and took several other shorter detours to avoid risky places, finally reaching the base of the falls about 10 o'clock. Then, as I lay on the moss, I had a soothing treatment from Millicent's soft, maternal hands. My head soon felt better and I was very grateful to her.

She would not even permit me to make the fire for preparing our lunch, and I fell asleep while she was roasting squabs.

During the afternoon I had several bad periods, but on the trail back I was quite normal, with the exception of George's voice continuously in my ear telling me, "I'll get you! I'll get you!" When we finally arrived where the bicycle was secreted and I wheeled it out Millicent seemed loath to leave me.

"Promise me faithfully you'll go straight back to the hotel and see Mr. Richards," she pleaded. "He'll probably know what to give you. Promise me?"

I made the promise and watched her ride off in the direction of Glen Ellen. Then, when she had disappeared with a final wave of her hand I was again assailed with monsters.

I didn't walk. I ran every step of the way to Agua Caliente, with hordes of frightful creatures racing me on either side. I got there breathless, but managed to avoid being seen—or thought I did—and entered my cottage with a sigh of relief, deciding that I would change clothes and make myself presentable before seeing Richards.

Army to "Muster Out" Goddess of Liberty

New York, May 18 (A.P.).—The Statue of Liberty today is undergoing overhauling prior to emerging as a national monument and withdrawing from the army, after being classed for thirty-nine years as a soldier.

"Miss Liberty's" transfer to civil status is being made by paint and Presidential proclamation.

Heretofore, she has been recorded at Washington as part and parcel of Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island. Her modest needs came from military post funds.

Hereafter she will have a budget of her own.

ARBUCKLE SAYS BLACKMAILERS SEEK $12,500

San Francisco Woman Back of "Whitewash" Scheme, the Comedian Declares

Los Angeles, May 18 (A.P.)—An alleged attempt by a San Francisco woman to obtain $12,500 in a black-mail scheme from Roscoe Arbuckle is being investigated today by the county district attorney, Arbuckle said. Arbuckle was married here on Saturday to Doris Deane.

The Los Angeles Examiner says a woman brought the name of Arthur Arbuckle, brother of Roscoe, into her negotiations.

A total of $12,500 was demanded, according to a paper reported to have been signed by the woman in the presence of Roscoe Arbuckle and two representatives of the district attorney, as friends of Arbuckle, the agreement being that the "name and character of Roscoe Arbuckle shall not be assailed or attacked in any manner before any club or organization, newspaper or Federation of Women's Club."

With BULLARD in the WORLD WAR

A. E. F. Commander's Own Intimate Story of Dark Days and Deeds of Valor When the Yanks Went to France

AS THESE are personal memoirs of Experiences, the pronoun "I" can never be out of sight. I am not offering these memories as absolute fact, but as my impression and belief at the time. —R. L. BULLARD.

IN the initial chapters of his memoirs, published in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser, General Bullard described the personality of his chief, General Pershing—"holding the confidence of his subordinates by his efficiency, but nowhere arousing enthusiasm." He told, too, of the plan under which American soldiers were schooled in France, taught the new science of war from the rudiments and discarding everything they had learned before. Also he dwelt briefly on the trouble they had getting action in Washington, while the French fumed. Speaking of the French generals, he said: "Marshal Foch they admire for his courage, genius and world prestige; but Petain they love—he knew their hearts."

The thrilling narrative continues today, and every week day in the Boston Evening American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Every instalment holds the same breathless interest. You will want to read every one of them.

CHAPTER IV—PERSHING'S ORGANIZATION

In September, 1917, we seemed dependent upon France and England for everything—unable to do anything alone. It gave me and many the feeling of being looked after, nursed, cared for. Of course, arrangements had been made by the proper American authorities with French and English to do all these things for us, and all was at last paid for; but we did not seem an independent, separate nation.

In October, still moving about much, I began to see Americans at work far and wide in France. Things began to grow; organization was coming. By the end of October it had arrived, fine and complete.

A network of American telegraph lines covered central and southern France; American detachments, small, it is true, but a framework, a beginning, were found at most unexpected places. Officers, offices and storehouses appeared numerously and rapidly. General Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont began to be called "G. H. Q.," the Great Headquarters. There and elsewhere I had time to give nearly two weeks' study to this organization. The officers most concerned in the making of this organization explained it to me.

No other two weeks of study, I think, ever so greatly profited me. I learned my place in it. After this study I felt great confidence in the completeness and perfection of the machine as built up under General Pershing. And this confidence was afterward completely justified.

In the eighteen following months of war and movement it failed nowhere. Under it no man, no organization, no thing was ever really lost or forgotten. It was a machine that worked in all its parts. They were to use it later, and wisely all American division commanders in their visits to France, beginning about this time, were required to study it. The only trouble was that they could not give enough time to its study—at most, some two or three days.

American Through and Through

This organization was not French, Italian, English or German, but, like most things American, a compound of any or all or none of them, as the commander-in-chief saw fit. Nor was it hard and fast, but easily changeable and adaptable. And adaptations were constant. In its building the commander-in-chief and his staff were fortunately without much tradition. "Fortunately," I say, because tradition is often more hobble than help. Quite in the American way, it was devised for the minute, for the work then at hand. Past and long future considerations could be neglected and the present actual needs could become and did seem to become the prime considerations. The staffs everywhere were naturally made greater than for the old accustomed armies of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany.

Command, service, supply, training, manoeuvre, campaign, battle, demobilization—every test this organization stood. The mind could be stunned with its figures. It is enough to say that, devised and hurriedly put to work in about four months under pressure of actual war and in a foreign land, for a contemplated force of only some 300,000 men, it met every strain of subsequent expansion, bringing in, abundantly supplying with all things necessary for war-making, training, fighting and taking out again more than two million men with their animals, transport and equipment.

Of this organization, the most striking part was the Services-of-Supply, the "S.O.S.," our line of communications in France. It was almost an original creation, because, neither the French nor the British service furnished any adequate example for our guidance.

At the end this mighty organization attracted the wonder and admiration of the greatest military minds of all the world. It was then working at its best. High Allied commanders were sent to visit and study it. Well they might. Its wonders and greatness were lost in figures appreciable only by the eye. I saw it only in its very beginning and its very end. Will the world ever again see its like? I doubt it. But one conceivable condition could call into being its like—a conflict of the East and the West, something that would take the armies of the West to the yellow East or the hordes of the yellow East to the West. It was the product of many brains, but of one will. Its like could be produced only where but one will governs, not ever

TORN COAT MAY JAIL 'BOBBY'

Teeth Too Sharp and Too Real to Be Considered Playful, Says Dorchester Woman

"Bobby," as handsome an airdale as ever roamed Dorchester streets or wagged a friendly tale at mailmen at No. 252 Columbia road, was held a prisoner, muzzled and leashed today, while his master, L. R. McLeod, and his attorney J. E. O'Connell, fought a losing fight in his defence in Dorchester District Court.

Not only did Mrs. Ellen Dolan, who entered the complaint against the canine defendant, charge "Bobby" with attacking her so fiercely that she required medical attention, but two more complainants arrived on the scene to swell the charges listed against the dog's name. On June 18 the whole story will be heard in court.

Mrs. Dolan accused the dog with biting her on the leg and ripping her coat. She displayed the coat and said "Bobby" had caused her such a fright that she had entered a complaint with the police.

The two others who likewise hold grievances against "Bobby"—Dorothy Barnaby and Louis Prensky—stated that the airedale had attacked them, causing bodily harm and torn clothing.

Police Officer McDonald, who had many complaints against the dog, said dozens of persons living down Columbia road, cross the street rather than run the gauntlet of "Bobby's" advances.

"Bobby's master, L. R. McLeod, made an eloquent plea. He stated that the dog was "all dog" and naturally playful and frolicsome. The attacks were not vicious, he said, and the dog meant no harm.

On numerous occasions "Bobby" has scared away marauders from the house, Mr. McLeod declared, and the dog was really a worthy citizen.

When the two other complaints were entered against "Bobby's" already black name, Attorney O'Connell declared that it was all the "spite-work" of Police Officer McDonald who had never warmed up to "Bobby's" advances, friendly or otherwise.

This, Officer McDonald hotly denied, saying that he liked a dog as well as anyone, but that "Bobby had always been a pest.

The court finally ruled that "Bobby's" trial should be set for June 18.

GIRL OF 16 WILL AID OLYMPIA

To Be Called This Week in Effort to Refute Widow's Testimony

By BERT FORD

New Haven, Ct., May 18.—Olympia Macri, twenty-year-old grand opera pupil on trial for her life, is reported to be depending not a little upon the testimony of Ida Slivey, a sixteen-year-old girl with black bobbed hair, in her fight to escape the gallows for the alleged murder of "Sheik" John Bagnano, cabaret singer and dancer.

Miss Slivey will be an important witness for the defence. She was introduced with dramatic suddenness on Friday by Attorney Joseph Koletsky in an effort to refute the testimony of the slain youth's 20 year-old widow, Mrs. Carolina Bagnano, who denied that her husband had gone around with other girls and women.

GIRL SIDETRACKED

In the absence of the jury, Attorney Koletsky called Miss Slivey and explained that he wished through her to show that she had been attacked by "Sheik" Bagnano in a shack in Middletown in August, 1923. This was after his marriage. Judge Avery ruled out the evidence as untimely and irrelevant.

Counsel for the defence could not have introduced Miss Slivey as a witness at that time with the State still putting in its case, but sought merely an identification of the girl by the murdered man's widow. Under the court's ruling Miss Slivey was sidetracked until called by the defence.

The fifth week of the trial will open on Tuesday. The State rested at 4.05 on Friday after having consumed fifteen court days. The defence put on three witnesses in the fifty minutes before adjournment.

DOCTOR'S TESTIMONY.

The most important was Dr. James A. Geddings, formerly jail physician who while acting in that capacity on March 4, nine days after the shooting, examined Olympia Macri and found a jagged permanent scar on her right hip, an inch and a quarter in length and a sixteenth of an inch in width. He said he also found a scratch on her neck, another on her arm and a third on her hand. These wounds he estimated were about two or three weeks old.

This evidence was offered in support of Olympia's claim that Bagnano, father of her child born out of wedlock, who had made threats on her life, attempted that day to shoot her and that she opened fire on him first in self defense.

JURY PROBING BRICKBOTTOM RAID AGAIN

Simultaneously with the dismissal today of the first defendant to be arraigned as a result of the "Brickbottom" raids in Somerville, the Middlesex Grand Jury went again behind closed doors and rumor spread in the courthouse that new indictments might be brought.

The first defendant to go on trial in the "Brickbottom" affair was Erasmo Caviechio, for fourteen years a resident of the section. He was acquitted by Special Justice Ralph M. Smith in Somerville Court. Erasmo conducts a grocery at No. 173 Somerville avenue. The charge was keeping and exposing liquor for sale.

Sergeant William J. Hackett of the State police said that when he entered Caviechio's store the grocer took him into a living room in the rear and showed him a bottle of alcohol and a bottle of rum. Caviechio said he used the alcohol to rub himself with and the rum to drink. He made no sale.

A detective in the employ of District Attorney Arthur K. Reading said he watched the grocery and had not seen any packages of doubtful appearance carried away.

Somerville policemen said the grocer had a good reputation.

Caviechio denied any intention to sell his rum. His wife corroborated his testimony.

Pups Drive 'Foster Mother' Back to Her Hencoop!

Springfield, May 18 (A.P.)—A Rhode Island Red hen that gained fame by adopting a litter of puppies on the farm of J. W. Cesan has changed her theories on puppy culture, for the pups, it was learned today, have turned against her.

Deaf to her motherly clucks, they have chased her from the barnyard back to the hen run.

Whereas she had been destined for the chopping block, Mr. Cesan has now decided to let her live.

ALL TEACHERS OF EVOLUTION FACE ARREST

Knoxville, Tenn., May 18.—Wholesale arrests of science teachers in Tennessee schools were forecast by Judge John R. Neal, counsel for Dr. J. C. Scopes of Dayton, if the anti-evolution law is upheld in the trial of Dr. Scopes.

Prosecution will be started against every High School science instructor in the State, Judge Neal declared.

"The object of the prosecutions," said Judge Neal, "will be to have the statute repealed if the court refuses to hold it unconstitutional. Examination of the text books prescribed by the State Uniform Text Book Commission, shows that all the books of science prescribed by law in Tennessee are based on the Darwin theory of evolution.

"Every instructor that teaches science in the public schools of the State is guilty. It is our object to force the repeal of the anti-evolution act by having it enforced, in event the courts fail to declare it unconstitutional."

EXPEDITION TO STUDY SLEEPING SICKNESS GERM

Geneva, May 18 (A.P.)—A communique from the League of Nations today emphasizes the importance of the international conference for the study of sleeping sickness which opens in London tomorrow. All countries where sleeping sickness has occurred will be represented and plans will be made for an expedition to Africa to study the maladies transferred by the tsetse fly to cattle and to human beings.

EX-COUNCILOR PLUNGES TO DEATH IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, March 18.—Losing his balance as he sat on a piazza rail at his home in Winter street, William Hines, formerly a City Councilman, tumbled to the ground today and suffered injuries which proved fatal a half hour later.

He died in the Gale Memorial Hospital. Nobody was with him on the piazza when he fell.

Relatives, who had seen him a few minutes before, say he was in good health and spirits then. They believe he became suddenly ill.

FRANCE TO OFFER DEBT PLAN WITHIN 15 DAYS

Paris, May 18 (A.P.)—The Temps said today it understands a definite proposal will be made within fifteen days by the French government to the United States and Great Britain for the settlement of war debts.

London, May 18 (I.N.S.)—England will press for Allied debt settlements, but will not set a time limit, Premier Stanley Baldwin told the House of Commons today. "I think there is no advantage to be gained by setting a time limit for France and other Allied debtors to pay their obligations to Great Britain,' he said.

5 DORCHESTER YOUTHS ARRESTED IN AUTO

Officer William F. Long of the Metropolitan Park police overhauled an automobile on the boulevard and arrested five young men, who gave their names as James J. Corbett of No. 125 Park street, Edward Duffy of No. 64 Greenwich street, Donald F. Donovan of No. 4 Orchard Field street, William Harvey of No. 10 Orchard Field street, and Ernest A. Macdonald of No. 25 Clayton street, all in Dorchester.

They were charged with drunkenness and with having an automobile in their possession without the consent of the owner. Macdonald was charged with operating while under the influence of liquor, without a license and without registration.

Tolstoi Gets Divorce

Paris, May 18 (A.P.)—Count Leo Tolstoi has been granted a divorce by the Paris courts from his wife, who was Marianne Sofsky. Tolstoi charged her with abandonment.

STIR OVER SMALL'S CHARGES

Professional Game to Be Substituted Here as Result of Amateur Probe

was captain of the United State ice hockey team at the last Olympic games.

If his charges are sustained, he will be convicted of professionalism, with the result that prizes won by the United States hockey team will be forfeited and the standing at the Olympics of this country will be seriously affected.

Sports followers were outspoken today in supporting Small, and many additional charges were made.

It was said that his trouble arose from the fact that the Boston Arena, which he claims supports the B. A. A. hockey team, made no money last season, owing to the ban imposed by the Canadian authorities on hockey games in this country.

This ban was put on, it was stated, because of the custom of American teams importing some of the best players from Canada, paying them larger salaries than could be offered in their own country.

ESCAPE INCOME TAX.

In this connection it was stated that Canadian amateur hockey players make large sums playing in the States, and because of their standing as "purest" are exempted from paying income taxes at home.

A man in a position to speak authoritatively declared that last year a certain much-touted Canadian, playing in the United States, turned down an offer of $10,000 a year to play professional baseball with one of the big league teams.

"Why should I turn 'pro' for $10,-000," he is quoted as saying, when I can make more money as an amateur playing hockey?"

As another evidence of the money which amateur hockey players receive, it was pointed out that during the playing season they frequently live at high-priced hotels with their entire families.

The same authority said that last year the services of another well-known Canadian player, amateur were sough by Boston and Pittsburgh teams, but the Pennsylvania city won by offering more money than the local organization.

NEW SCHEDULE.

Owing to the ban imposed by the Canadian authorities, a new schedule was prepared, consisting of games between four teams making up the eastern wing of the United States Amateur Hockey League. The teams consisted of the B. A. A. the Boston Hockey Club and The Maples, all of this city, and the Fort Pitt Hornets of Pittsburgh. The Maples are Canadians, although playing in Boston under the management of a Boston business salesman. Many of the Fort Pitt Hornets are also Canadians.

After a time the hockey fans lost interest in seeing the same teams meet each other over and over again, with the result that the box office receipt at the Arena fell off.

Sport followers claim that in consequence the salaries of the hockey players were cut, and all took it except Small.

ONLY 3 REAL AMATEURS.

Although conditions are said to be better in boxing and track circles, those in a position to know declare that professionalism is rife, in spite denials by such men as J. Frank Facey, chairman of the registration committee of the New England A. A. A. U.

"The only sinnon pure amateurs in New England today, whose standing cannot be questioned, are Clarence DeMar, George Owen and Jimmie Henigan," an old-timer, who ought to know, declared today.

His statement was borne out by other sports followers who have been in the game with their eyes wide open for a good many years.

One man closely affiliated with the track game, declared that runners, college stars and others, had been receiving cash for their services for the last ten years at least.

MANAGER'S "RAKE-OFF."

He went even further and told of an instance when an amateur official, a member of the registration committee, acted as manager for two college players, both of whom received cash for their work. Not only did this particular man countenance the payment of money, but he is charged with having taken 33 1-3 per cent of their remuneration for his own services as manager.

J. Frank Facey, chairman of the registration committee of the New England A. A. A. U., said:

"I don't know anything about boxey conditions, but I do about boxing requirements, and I want to deny the charge that amateur boxers are paid cash prizes instead of watches and other trophies.

"As for the running game I don't see who there is who wants to pay the average track man. I read about Irving Small's broadside about hockey, but that's out of my line."

MARQUARD'S WIFE IS MANAGER IN HOME

Mrs. Richard Marquard, wife of the celebrated Braves pitcher.

"Rube, Though, Is Not Obliged to Diet—Wife Is .400 Hitter in the Cooking League

Of course, you know all about what our baseball heroes do when out at Fenway Park and Braves Field. Miss Helen Bissett, talented young writer, takes you into the homes of the heroes of our national pastime. She shows you "The Home Life of the Ball Players." This is the second of the series.

By HELEN BISSETT

Mrs. Richard Marquard is the best cook in the world, according to Mr. Richard Marquard, and he ought to know.

The dark-eyed daughter of Maryland looked at the partner of her joys and sorrows and laughed. "He said that just after we were married and I hadn't done any more than boil an egg. Now I have had time to experiment and am doing quite well—maybe he is making fun of me."

Just now the Marquards are flat-hunting. "Every time the phone rings I think it's someone with a flat. I hope to get one soon because one gets tired of hotel life. And I like to fuss about my own place.

The place they both love is their Florida home.

"We go there every Winter," said "I like to cook, but darn socks and mend? Not so well."

However, Mrs. Marquard can sew and knit and crochet and make bead bags that look like French imports, and when she isn't at the ball park she is busy with her embroidery. There isn't an idle moment in her day.

Mrs. Marquard, "It's just the dearest house and we have been wondering how the grass is doing. I make a little garden and work in it myself. Then I can cook for my husband.

The big pitcher grinned at his smaller half. "She lets me eat anything I like and I don't diet," he observed, "I weigh about 200 pounds which is about right."

Marquard is six feet three inches in height but his wife isn't afraid of him, and she does just as she likes.

She is keen about baseball and never misses a game. "Until I was married, though, I went to games in a casual manner but now I keep up to the training. It's the thrill of a lifetime to see the boys come onto the field. I shriek like the rest of the fans.

"Boston crowds are very polite. Western crowds are much more wild. It used to hurt me dreadfully at first to hear the things some of them yelled from the stands. At my husband, too! But now I don't mind. It's all part of the game."

As for Rube, he just sits and looks at his wife and quite evidently likes to have her order him around. Then he smiles and says, "Well, she's the best cook in the world, don't forget it."

RUNYON SAYS

Here's Quick Thinking. It Was on the Stage. Who had EVERY-THING? T. R. Cobb, of Georgia. Where's Next Champ?

YOU'VE heard a lot of stories of quick thinking in the ring, and on the field of athletic competition. Here's one about the stage.

In Australian vaudeville theatres, when an audience doesn't care for an act, it starts counting after the manner of a referee over a fallen fighter in a pugilistic bout.

Al Herman, well known American black face comedian was doing his monologue one night over there when he heard arising from the house an ominous "One! Two! Three! Four! Five!"

Damon Runyon

Herman took it up.

"—Six! Seven! Eight! Nine!" he chanted with the audience, then:

"TEN!—Perhaps you're right!" he said, and started to walk off the stage.

A wild roar of applause halted his exit, and he returned and completed his act to the most attentive and appreciative audience he ever faced.

His quick thinking turned a count out into a knock-out.

JUNIOR is cross-examining the world twenty years from now on the baseball players of his experience. A transcript of the testimony follows:

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

The clubhead, in the driving swing, travels forward not around to the left, as it passes through the ball. I recently illustrated this in a rather dramatic manner by having one of my assistants stand directly in front of me about a club's length and 14 inches to the left of the direction line through the ball. I then made a full swing and the clubhead, passing through the ball, never touched the man standing in front of me. Drawing in the arms causes the clubhead to cut inward across the ball, too, and results in slicing.

This drawing in often results from lateness in timing, and the late timing is caused by a lack of weight, or hand, throwing of the clubhead. In the forward swing the right elbow shoots directly across the stomach. Say "Boy-swing" when you get near the ball, then shoot the clubhead through it. Throw it, however—don't try to push it with the body.

NEW ENGLAND GIRLS SEEK GOLF TITLE

By BILL GRIMES

Having drawn byes in the first round of the British Women's championship tournament at Troon, Glenna Collett, the former United States champion, and Harriet Allison of Brae-Burn will not get underway until tomorrow. Miss O'Gorman, another Providence girl, is playing this morning.

An unfortunate drawing brings Glenna Collett and Joyce Wetherd, ranked as the world's greatest women player, together on Wednesday, providing, of course, both are successful in their early matches. Miss Collett is the hope of the United States. She has been playing high-class golf since she landed in England but will have to be at the top of her game to successfully cope with the British champion.

Mae O'Gorman Out of Tourney at Troon

Troon, Scotland, May 18 (A.P.)—Miss Joyce Wethered, the little holder, survived the first round of the British Women's golf championship today by defeating Miss Wardell, of Ireland, 7 up and 6 to play.

Miss Mae O'Gorman of Providence, R. I., was the first American entrant to be eliminated, failing before the experienced Doris Chambers. The score was 8 up and 7 to play.

Miss Cecil Leitch, former British champion, defeated Mrs. Jack Occhiane, Banchory, 8 up and 6 to play. Miss Edith Leitch, Walton Heath, defeated Mrs. Cautley, Thanet, by 1 up.

Miss Cox, the Welsh champion, defeated Mrs. J. Collis Brown, 3 up and 2 to play, and thus earns the right to meet Glenna Collett, the former American champion, in the second round tomorrow.

Both Miss Cox and Miss Brown played a high-class game all the way. Those who watched the Welsh champion's work figured Miss Collett would have to put up a really good game to dispose of her antagonist of tomorrow. Miss Cox's card included four birdies and on only three holes did she take higher than scratch scores.

Mrs. Allan Macbeth, Bowdon, defeated Miss Dobson, Royal Hall, 2 up and 1 to play. Mrs. Macbeth will meet Miss Wethered in the second round tomorrow.

Playing a fairly good game, Miss Collett defeated Miss Jye Winn, the surrey player, one up in a practice game this afternoon.

TAD'S TIDBITS

TOMMY RYAN PICKS HIS GREATEST FIGHTERS

Tommy Ryan, the middleweight champion of years ago, was interviewed out West recently and gave as his list of great ring men the following:

"Well," said Ryan, "at the head of all fighters you must put James J. Corbett. I think Corbett and James J. Jeffries were the two greatest heavyweights. Jeffries defeated Corbett, of course, but I doubt if he could have done it when Corbett was in his prime.

"For middleweight, Robert J. Fitzsimmons. He was a great hitter and a great fighter. Fitz was a legitimate middleweight. When the match was made with Frank Craig, of Harlem Coffee Cooler, Fitz dropped out and I succeeded him. I fought all comers, middleweights, light heavyweights and heavyweights. When Kid McCoy fought me he was over the middleweight limit.

"Among the welters you would have to go a long way to get a better one than Joe Walcott. "Mysterious" Billy Smith beat him, but I think Walcott was a wonderful fighter.

"For lightweights, the choice lies between Jack McAuliffe and Joe Gans. A great champion Gans.

"In the bantamweight class, George Dixon ruled alone.

"Society's roster is called "Who's Who?"

And Egbert thinks the world ought To make a select list of its broadcasting stations

And call the volume "Watts Watt."

"Paul Paintieve Has Asked Joseph Cailiaux to Join His French Cabinet"—Headline.

From which we would infer that Paul Painleve is a French carpenter, who builds cabinets and Joseph Caillaux is a joiner.

"Seagram's Digit Is Canada's Hope in Dixie Handicap."—Another headline.

Mr. Seagram is a Canadian distiller, and a digit is only one finger. Would it not have been more appropriate to have named the entry Three Fingers?

"Springtime Is a Time of Danger."—Medicine advertisement headline.

It surely is. In the Springtime a young man's fancy, etc.

We were quite disappointed to learn that the hotel which equipped its rooms with radio sets for the use of its guests had not also changed its name to "Listen Inn."

LOSING STREAK TO END AT WIGWAM

By NICK FLATLEY.

A couple of losing streaks collide at the Wigwam today, no one of them must end. The Braves open a series with the Cincinnati Reds. The Tribe has dropped three in a row, all to the Pirates. The Reds inhaled the dust of the Giants on four successive afternoons. The combined collection of disaster seemed to assure a lot of excitement at the big ball yard.

Nick Flatley

Teams that are losing when they think they should be collecting are inclined to grow scrappy. The Reds started off as if they intended to ring right into the race. But they have come on hard times. The Braves knocked off five straight wins before the Corsairs invaded the village.

Manager Bancroft, who is back in the game with his unexpectedly vicious hitting habits the same as ever, thinks the Red streak will keep right on. The Braves, according to Banny, are due to win a few.

"Two of those Pittsburgh games were just matters of luck," he explains. "I made a couple of boots myself Saturday, or we would have won in the regular distance. That last 10-4 one we lost wasn't a parade for the Pirates, either. And Pittsburgh has a good ball club.

"In fact, they're all pretty good this year. There don't seem to be any soft spots anywhere. The Phillies, as they go along, are playing tighter baseball all the time and should be able to make life miserable for anybody from here in."

The Reds remain for three days and are followed by the Cards, who figure for a similar stretch. Next week the Robins and the Giants come along and wind up the home stand.

PAL REED TO MAKE $50,000 IF HE KAYOS FLOWERS

TIGER PICKED TO WIN

Fuller and Vacca Clash in the Semi-Final at C. A. C. Show Tonight

By JACK CONWAY

PAL REED, Framingham's "Fighting Parson," can secure boxing [illegible] which will net him $[illegible] if he can knock out Tiger Flowers in their ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C. show at Mechanics Building tonight.

Jack Conway

It will only require a single punch for Reed to place [illegible] on his [illegible]. This is the essence of [illegible] Reed CAN PUNCH. Pal can sock equally as hard as Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, who knocked out the Tiger twice.

[illegible]

The Tiger is easy to hit. He is [illegible] Lou Bogash was able to hit Flowers hard enough to knock him down [illegible].

[illegible]

The Fighting Parson [illegible] after Flowers as he did after one Frankie [illegible]. Reed [illegible] knocked out Lou Bogash at [illegible] was on the pugilistic heights when he [illegible] Reed. The latter knocked [illegible] down three times. Later Pal took a trip to New York and gave Jack Delaney a rugged session for twelve rounds.

Opportunity now knocks on Reed's door again. Flowers is a national [illegible] where he will be able to secure from $5,000 to $10,000 for each bout. And when a boxer is getting this kind of money it does not take him very long to accumulate a $50,000 bank roll.

THE young men who make the [illegible] have made Flowers a favorite [illegible] the Tiger of the [illegible] They argue that Flowers is almost as fast as a lightning bolt. They don't think that Reed will be able to step along at the torrid clip that the Tiger is sure to set.

"Of course," admit the speculative gentlemen, "if Reed pops the Tiger on the chin with a wild left hand thrust it may be a different story."

There will be a colorful preliminary card. The semi-final [illegible] together Sammy Fuller of the North End and Johnny Vacca of Brighton. These boys are [illegible] and [illegible] the fans with a flock of thrills.

Lew Perfetti of New York will make his second Boston appearance with Johnny Moore of the North End as an opponent.

Pete Sterman of Nashua, N. H., and Won Moulian of the North End, a couple of punchers, will open the show.

Greb and McCarthy to Battle Friday

HARRY GREB, world middleweight champion, and Pat McCarthy of Roxbury will top the Suffolk A. A.'s card at a show which will be staged at the Arena on Friday night.

Greb is the most active of our champions. He is one title holder who is not concerned with having his features made to resemble those of a moving picture actor and who prefers the ring to the silver screen.

Dan Morgan recently declared that Greb is doing more to keep up interest in boxing than any of our title holders.

Greb also meets all-comers. He is only interested in how much money he is to be paid for his services and the date of the bout. Opponents don't concern him. He figures he can defeat any man in the world in a ten-round bout. He doesn't even bar Dempsey.

Pat McCarthy, his eyesight corrected by three operations, figures to give Greb a hard fight. McCarthy won his last five starts, most of them by knockouts. McCarthy has natural fighting ability. Greb will make him use all of it which means there should be action on [illegible]day night.

FORTUNES FOR VICTORS OF BOUTS

Miss Opportunity will be whispering into the ears of the rival boxers as they prepare to enter the ring at Mechanics Building tonight. Sammy Fuller, North End youngster, shown at the top on the left, will be in line for a bout with Pancho Villa if he wins over Johnny Vacca of Brighton in the semi-final. "Parson Pal" Reed, depicted on right, will earn $50,000 in purses if he knocks out the sensational Tiger Flowers, who is shown in the insert below. There's the bell, boys. Now go to it.

Dempsey---Love and Fear

By JACK CONWAY

John Lester Johnson was a caller at this office. Johnson is a negro heavyweight. He is one of the few men who have DEFEATED Jack Dempsey. The big negro broke two of the champion's ribs when they battled for a $250 purse at the Harlam Sporting Club in New York in 1916. After the tussle the badly bruised fighters each received the magnificent sum of $125. Dempsey now pays this much money each week to Jerry, the Greek, who acts as his valet and general handy man.

Johnson later fought Harry Wills, great negro heavyweight, twice. In the first bout, Johnson knocked Wills out. The referee saved the day for Wills by giving him a slow count.

We asked Johnson who was the greatest fighter, Dempsey or Wills?

"I always thought Dempsey was a better fighter than Wills until recently," said Johnson. "Now that the champion refuses to defend his title against Harry, it is apparent he [illegible] the challenger. And if Dempsey himself is not confident he can conquer Wills, why should I be certain he can do so? The Dempsey I fought was a better fighter than the Wills I met on two occasions. But if Dempsey FEARS Wills he cannot defeat him even though he is a better fighter than his rival.

Dempsey's friends will tell you he does not fear Wills. Instead they say it is his love for Estelle Taylor which is keeping him out of the ring. The beautiful moving picture actress is said to be opposed to having her brand new husband fight.

Will Dempsey's love for his wife, if this is the reason he is not fighting, be able to keep him out of the ring after he [illegible] repeatedly charged with being afraid of his colored challenger?

Even a coward, and nobody has ever applied this term to the Jack of Hearts, becomes transformed into a fighting, snarling human tiger when branded as "yellow." And this is the brutal tag placed on a ring champion who will not fight a logical contender.

IT'S GREAT TO BE ALIVE—greater still to feel alive. That's why men get such kick out of Lifebuoy. You feel its wonderful new cleanness. Something happens to your skin. It's like a hot and cold shower after a hard game —like the tang of an ocean dip. Sluggishness zinces away. Pores awake. The skin lives.

In this tingling cleansing of pores is priceless protection. Germs are flooded off. The germs that get on skin all the time and hide away in the sticky moisture and body-waste that constantly collect in pores—the hidden, pathogenic dirt other soaps don't seem to reach. You are rid of body odors, too.

Try Lifebuoy for shaving

No beard can resist it. If it wasn't the finest toilet soap a man ever used —we'd offer it as the best shaving soap. It's both. Six months of wonderful shaves in a cake. The creamy, abundant lather forms instantly and keeps moist. Skin feels great afterwards. It's antiseptic—cuts heal at once. Try it for everything—shampoo —face—bath—after auto tinkering. Keep it in your club locker and at the office. Tell the family what Lifebuoy means to you. It's the complete toilet soap—it's your soap after a week's trial. Try it.

in a democracy. Democracy means mediocrity. This was superiority.

CHAPTER V—BLUE DAYS OF FRENCH DEPRESSION

From the discouragement and demoralization in which the French army and French people found themselves after the failure of their spring offensive in 1917 and at the time of the arrival of the Americans toward the end of June there was by the end of September a very marked recovery. This recovery was most largely due to the encouragement of the arrival of American troops in France.

These powers had hardly taken effect, however, before there supervened a worse and more general depression of spirits. The defection of Russia had become sure, carrying almost consternation to the Allies. Not only had she failed the Allies but ... she was about to desert to the enemy.

As the Russians slowly failed the French government became more and more demoralized and weaker. Influential Frenchmen, notably Caillaux and Bolo, began secretly to arrange to have France accept German terms and "quit," leaving Great Britain in the lurch. This made its appeal to the oldtime French hatred of the English. I could feel the growing rottenness wherever I was in France. Germany was plainly acquiring friends, spies and helpers in France these days. Communication with the enemy was growing through Switzerland. There was no mistaking ... French government officials ... in the ... to yield ... than was ... Frenchmen ... With regard to ... a strong feeling of ... was spreading more and more through France.

To this depression the slow progress of the United States forces in France ... effective entrance into the war contributed. The first American ... France ... end of June 1917 ... Other ... months of ... September ... men ... front line ... French people ... of the ... United States ... were ... than ... United States ... the present ... our French Allies will become ... somewhat become critical. I hear some question already among the weak-hearted as to why the United States puts ... the railroad ... men ... fighting line. That shows ... a bit. Though ... nevertheless was ... I fear (diary) we are doomed to many failures here in France. I know that French men who do not know the truth ... coming to France are now beginning to criticize our not sending American troops up on to the front.

Psychological, Not Military, Force

"The true inwardness which these do not know is that the French government, through General Joffre hysterically besought the United States to send some troops over to France 'quick'—for the moral effect upon France, which was almost ready to give up the fight. Thus we came hurriedly, not as a military, but as a psychological expedition.

We have not yet become a military expedition, but we have always from the date of our arrival had an enormous moral bracing effect upon France which has completely recovered heart and determination for the fight. Thus we have fulfilled our real purpose and the French ought to wait for our military purpose. We are only beginning that now. Yet in the last few days I heard some more talk of French impatience to see us go upon the front lines. Well, they must wait. I should say, as we have as yet very little to put upon the front lines, and if we do anything of the sort it will be for the purpose of deceiving the French public, making it think that we are doing something.

"If we do go up to the front I should say also that it is most important to do so in ... units ... otherwise we should soon have ... upon the front line ... that we would soon have to relieve our troops and we would, if we ... them to the front in ... no others ... relieve them. The Germans ... we had been knocked out on the first round."

After an organization in France was in the middle of the Fall still incomplete and unprepared to operate fully and the prospect that we would soon be able to take any effective part in the war was small. I write:

"September 27, 1917 (diary)—We are being nursed and cared for (meaning helped in supply, transportation and equipment) by the French. They will, I fear, soon become tired and disgusted with us, as they are with the Russians and were some time since with the English."

A memory of flowers, the grand soaring voice of the organ singing a McDowell idyl, the rustle of satin, the scurrying of feet up and down stairs for days before, ... of girl and men voices, doors slammed, friends dodging in and out any hour of the day, the mist of a veil, the glinting gold ... the soft ... voice that spoke to ... Then the peaceful departing ... through Maine and New Hampshire ... their own little ... turbed, unheralded.

And then, after charming, misty-memoried, pal and lover weeks, why back to the little house again to begin housekeeping in earnest.

MY ROMANTIC HUSBAND

A Sequel to "Ways of a Husband"

By Ann Lisle

"IF you need a pal, Anne, count on me," said Ralph. "If you need protection from your own thoughts confide in me. And if you want to think of me as the brother I ... just play I'm Neal and cry it out on my shoulder ... will do you any good."

"The handkerchief," I murmured so low that the noise of the car kept the sound of my voice from those in the seats ahead. "You know whose it was?"

... Ralph ...

I turned and faced him in astonishment that he should believe cynicism or acceptance of modern standards would satisfy me. But Ralph's expression was so kindly and gentle and understanding that I knew I had failed to fathom his meaning.

"What of—what?" I managed with a smile.

"What difference does it make whose handkerchief it was?" asked Ralph quietly. "Don't you think there have been plenty of opportunities for a light-fingered person like Barry De Courcey or Diversey, or whatever he chooses to call himself, to add any number of trifles to his collection of ... or sleight-of-hand performances?"

"You think——" I began, but Ralph smiled as he said:

"I come pretty near knowing. Just recall the way that boy played ... Remember ... Brooke ... jewel was paste ... genuine. Maybe it was an actual surprise ... to find a paste jewel where she had thought to come across a real diamond—her own real jewel. Perhaps the girl is not yet aware of the depths to which her brother can go."

"Why think of him as worse than she is?" I demanded.

"Because that is the only way to come to a solution," Ralph answered. "Brooke is selfish, an adventuress unscrupulous—as far as her imagination works. But the girl has not a master mind, nor yet the courage to do anything very startling."

... Brooke is ... convinced that she can cash in on her great beauty and find happiness in the world. She has everything to lose by becoming a criminal and ...

"And Barry?" I asked.

But before Ralph ... answer the car took a sudden leap forward, flinging me against the back of the seat.

I was stunned, and for a moment I felt that the end had come. Then a whiff of acrid smoke came to my nostrils, and I sat up hastily as we plunged through the gate of Tremaine House and into a cloud of smoke.

"The house is on fire!" shouted Johnny Tremaine, reaching for the door of Matt Hawley's limousine and trying to leap out as we turned into the gate of Tremaine Hall ... were met by a cloud of acrid smoke. Oh my poor Lucie! Lucie—I'm coming!"

Ralph caught him and dragged him back as the car gave another lurch and leaped forward at a tremendous speed.

In another moment we were at the door of the house and behind us the ... smoke ... the other end of the drive.

MAKING COLD CREAM

By Maria Jeritza

HAVE you ever tried making your own cold cream? No! Well ... as making fudge. And if you're careful and follow directions exactly you're likely to have a very delightful and individual toilet requisite as reward for your efforts.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: ... will you ... advise the proper gloves to be worn by a bride at a church wedding? Also please advise the glove to be worn by the maid of honor. A READER

THE bride should not wear short gloves with a sleeveless dress. She should wear long, white kid gloves. Sometimes the bride chooses not to wear gloves, but with a formal dress usually gloves are worn by the bride. If gloves complete the harmony of the costume, then, of course, she should wear them. The same thing applies to the maid of honor and bridesmaids, although ... often the bride ... all the attendants do.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: What is the correct way to eat asparagus when the whole stalks are served?

2—This stationery, I believe, is in good taste, but would you consider it too conservative for a young matron?

G. A. R.

ASPARAGUS should be eaten with a fork. The edible part is eaten as are all fork foods, and the rest of the stalk is left on the plate. It is much better not to take asparagus in the fingers, for this always gives an untidy, unpleasant effect. And certainly the innocent, tender asparagus stalks should not be suspended in the air and dropped perilously into the mouth.

2—Your letter paper is in good taste, and one reason that it is is that it is conservative. Indeed, I think that, instead of being too conservative, it might be of a ... a lighter ... dark, I think, but ... pleasant one ... spacing of your letter is very ... It is best not to use any abbreviations on the envelope or in the heading of the letter.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A LIVE WIRE

By Evangeline Weir

MISS BETSY DRAKE was on her knees before an old chest long closed. She was looking for an old letter written in Colonial days to give to the Historical Society.

Among other things she found a yellow [illegible] [illegible]

Desire to Read It

[illegible]

"[illegible] twenty years ago," she said [illegible] "Now that [illegible] [illegible] behind too old and weary to entertain my audience.

"I can be honestly middle-aged and enjoy myself in my own way. If I had married him, I'd be spending my time in beauty parlors, lip sticks, [illegible] mud baths, permanent [illegible] sticky creams."

[illegible] regret, [illegible] to the fire [illegible] valued of the other [illegible] to the front door [illegible] impatient to gain [illegible] rarely [illegible] [illegible] than her own. [illegible] the entrance and [illegible] As a [illegible] was kept up, Miss [illegible] did not spare [illegible]

Girl Smiled

"Couldn't you wait until I [illegible] to get here? The side door [illegible] the usual entrance anyway."

The girl who caused the [illegible] and said without a sign [illegible]

"I am a stranger and did [illegible] down for the [illegible]"

"Don't be pert, miss; it's a disease of the age and very unlovely."

"As if a disease could possibly be [illegible] the girl [illegible] you will kindly ask me in, I'll explain why I am here."

Miss Betsy looked suspicious.

"Are you a book agent or a travelling saleswoman for things we have no use for in this village?"

"I do not need money," was the answer.

"What do you need?" Miss Betsy asked sharply.

"I need a home," the girl replied.

Miss Betsy was startled. She was pretty, well dressed girl begging a home—a girl who admitted she had no need of money.

"[illegible] in," Miss Betsy said ungrudgingly, "and do not talk like a [illegible] novel."

"Or a cross-word puzzle," the girl added, accepting the invitation to enter. "Oh!" she exclaimed suddenly. "What a beautiful old hall. It is exactly as father said it was twenty [illegible] ago."

"What does your father know about my house, miss?"

"He knows everything about it," was the answer. "There is that beautiful old desk he told me about—the one with the secret drawers."

Old Furniture

"Have you come to buy old furniture?" Miss Betsy asked coldly. "I [illegible] tell you at once that I have none to sell."

"Of course you would not sell it," the girl said with an air of understanding. "It has been in your family since 1750."

Miss Betsy looked at her coldly and said, "When you are done exploring, will you kindly make known your errand?"

"Father sent me—I have a letter for you. He sealed it so that I could not read it," she told Miss Betsy as she handed it to her. "I am a lot of trouble to that poor man!"

"I can well believe it," Miss Betsy told her as she took the letter and glanced at the address.

She forgot the girl in her sudden surprise; the writing was similar to that on the letters she had just burned. She opened it without a comment, however, and read the contents.

"Dear Betsy: I am sending my daughter to you for safe keeping while I go to Europe for six months. For the sake of our old friendship I beg you to accept her. Rose is eighteen and a law unto herself. Her mother has been dead ten years. I am obliged to go abroad on business and I feel that Rose will be safe with you in our quiet old village where modern vices and follies are unknown. I have told her so much about my old home and you that she feels well acquainted with both. Bear with her acceptance of things and allow her to love you for I have prepared the ground for such a seed. Your long friend,

ALBERT WOOD."

Guided by Her

Miss Betsy looked at the daughter of her old lover and her face softened. She might have been her own if——

"If you are to remain with me, Rose, during your father's absence, remember you are to be guided by me instead of my being led by you, as is the present custom among flappers. For the time being, I fill a mother's place to you and I expect you to give [illegible]

"That is [illegible] you to [illegible] up her [illegible]

Miss B[illegible]

[illegible]

"I knew [illegible]

"When he [illegible] We are [illegible]

Miss [illegible] had the [illegible]

[illegible] you on [illegible]

[illegible] venture," she told [illegible]

To Look Him Over

"[illegible] is just time [illegible] Boston [illegible] tonight."

Miss Betsy tried to stop [illegible] she was already talking to [illegible] There was nothing to do, but [illegible]

"Get a high speed car and come down at once and say good-by to us. We both expect you." Then she hung up.

"Rose, didn't I tell you that you were to be guided by my advice?"

"You said you wanted to look him over."

"You are going to be a great trouble to me, I see."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

TO relieve congestion, a Middle Western city has installed moving sidewalks. This is nothing new; thousands of men have gotten the same effect with liquor.

TWO good drinks can bring the whole world around to your door.

OF course with the liquor you get nowadays it's hard to stay on the sidewalk after you've had one drink.

THESE galloping sidewalks are great things for families who haven't got an automobile.

YET, they have to do is stand on the pavement and ride down town.

THIS city is your chauffeur.

AFTER you ride to work on a moving sidewalk you don't have to get around for a place to park it.

THERE'S no walking necessary. A man can go to the office in his bedroom slippers.

THE great fun to stand on the pavement and watch the gutters go whizzing by.

THESE sidewalks run on schedule and a man knows just what time the square he's standing on is going to arrive in front of his house.

OF course these sidewalks are hard to sweep. One guy started sweeping the walk in front of his bungalow last week and he's still sweeping it.

HE said he never saw so much sidewalk since the last time he stepped on a banana peel.

THESE walks are like rocks in the country. Coming and going all the time.

THEY have no more brakes than a handful of quicksilver.

THESE animated pavements don't have any seats. They're like the middle of a married man's backseat—built for feet.

IF you want to sit down you've got to wait until Winter comes when they're covered with ice.

THERE'S no charge for riding on these moving sidewalks. The service is free, the same as in patrol wagons.

SUBURBAN railroads will soon be out of date. A train can beat you to a station, but you can never miss a sidewalk.

Tortured for years by varicose veins
Trouble entirely healed by Resinol

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 23:—"I had suffered from varicose veins for 2½ years and had doctored continuously without results as I could not keep off my feet. The pain was so great that I could not sleep and I cried out at night until I was completely exhausted. My hair was turning gray and I thought I would lose my mind. Last summer my son had a sore on his chin and Resinol healed it, so I decided to try it myself. In little less than a week I obtained relief and in six months time the trouble was entirely healed. I cannot tell you how thankful I am—I am the happiest woman in the world and I owe it all to Resinol." (Signed) Mrs. Gussie Newman, 3454 Orchard St.

MAN, STYLE AND WIFE

By Lucy Lowell

LISTEN, MISTER: How much censoring do you do on friend wife's clothes?

Yes, I know. You pay the bills. But what do you SAY about the way her clothes look after they're on her back.

Do you kick if her knees show when she walks? Do you send her back to pin up the V of her blouse?

I'm wondering because I've just been reading what Mrs. Jenny Hermey, of Newark, told the judge when she brought suit for divorce. She couldn't stand her husband, she declared, because he was just that pernickety and officious about what she wore.

Mrs. Hermey, who is young and pretty, makes a practice of getting herself up according to the prevailing mode for young and pretty women. She dresses neither more demurely nor more daringly than her friends. But when she'd appear all dolled up for a walk on the avenue or a trip to the theatre, these are some of the things Mr. Husband would make her do:

Pin up the neck of her dress.

Lower her skirt.

Stand in a strong light to reveal the presence—or otherwise—of a petticoat.

"And what's the use," she asked in effect, "of trying to look stylish if you have to wear high necks, long skirts and petticoats?" And she was dreadfully indignant.

Did she have a right to be indignant? Or should she have felt flattered by hubby's interest?

How would YOUR wife feel under the same circumstances?

Someway or other I can't see that Mr. Hermey's conduct was so appalling. Despite the dictates of the style-makers, most skirts ARE too short for either grace or beauty. The decollete throat is an eyesore on the street and the slinky sa skirt, with no petticoat beneath, ought to be stopped by law!

But the fact remains that while most women dress this way, Mrs. Hermey might contend, with perfect logic, that she would be conspicuous and, therefore, uncomfortable, garbed in any other fashion!

After all, isn't the question of a wife's clothes a personal matter between herself and her husband?

It seems to me that all our Mrs. Hermeys might bring about a compromise in their dress between the styles and what their husbands like.

If men-folks object to knee-length skirts hems may be lowered—though not necessarily to the ankles.

Or should wives laugh off their husband's chagrin and dress any way they like?

What do YOU think about it, Mister?

THEY SEE A LITTLE CANNIBAL

By Foxy Grandpa

"LET'S turn up this lane, Foxy Grandpa," suggested Bunny as one day when we were taking a drive in the country. "I'm looking for something."

Now what could he be looking for in that road? I wondered. However, I kept on going and asked no questions, and as we went further into the road I could see that we were in a very lonely place.

"Do you think there are any bandits around here?" whispered Bobby.

But I did not have time to answer his question, for at that very moment, Bunny stood up on his hind legs, raised his right paw like a traffic policeman and said very quietly:

"Put on your brakes."

I carried out Bunny's orders at once and stopped my engine.

Then he motioned to us to climb out quietly. When we were on the ground, Bunny raised his paw warningly and pointed to the road ahead.

There right in the middle of the road, where they were raising a small cloud of dust, were two little gray animals—fighting for all they were worth. In fact, they were so intent on the battle which they were waging against each other, that they had taken no notice of our approaching car. It was only Bunny's keen, plain eyes which discovered them. Otherwise we would have surely run over the little fighters.

"Mice?" asked Bobby.

"No," replied Bunny.

"Moles?" I inquired.

"No," replied Bunny, "but as I said to them."

"Wonder what they are?" whispered Bobby as the tiny gray animals flew at each other's throats.

"Shrews," announced Bunny. "They're terrible fighters."

We stood quietly for a moment watching this contest and soon we saw that one of the little shrews was getting the best of the other.

"Shall we separate them?" asked Bobby.

"Oh, no" said Bunny. "They must settle their differences themselves."

The fight continued. They paid no attention to us whatever. Finally one little shrew toppled over.

"He's agonez," I said, expecting to see the victor trot off into the woods.

But you will be surprised when I tell you what the winner of that duel did. The little shrew sat right down by his vanquished foe and right there before our very eyes, commenced eating him up!

"Who'd ever think we would find a cannibal right here in this civilized country?" said Bunny, as he hopped up into the car.

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

America is not marching towards prosperity with military evenness of rank. Some industries are advancing with quick-time speed; others are moving forward slowly, and some are only marking time.

* * *

The majority of developments during the last week have been encouraging. Such developments have occurred in banking, in securities, in prices, in industry, in agriculture, in retailing, in foreign trade.

There have been a few unfavorable developments, but it can be said that the "ayes" have it.

* * *

Let's call the roll:

The banks have strengthened their position and money rates continue favorable to borrowers.

Bonds on the New York Stock Exchange have reached the highest level in eight years.

Stock quotations have been mildly irregular, within however, a nominal net gain for the week after fairly active dealings.

Sterling exchange has touched a new high point, and gold shipments from London have been offset in substantial measure by purchases of the metal by the Bank of England, so that there appears to be no imminent menace of any demoralizing drain upon London's gold.

Our April merchandise exports are officially shown to have been astonishingly large, $400,000,000, the best April record since 1920 and $51,000,000 above the month's imports.

The latest building statistics exceeded expectations, with new permits being taken out on a scale that presages continued activity on a very extensive scale. Contracts awarded during April were, in fact, the heaviest ever known.

Railway car loadings have established a new weekly record for the current year. The American Railway Association announces that, to cope with looked-for record breaking traffic this year, the railroads are preparing to spend $750,000,000 for new equipment and other improvements.

For the first time in several months, Dun chronicles more advances than declines in wholesale commodity prices. In foodstuffs there were, roughly, two advances for every decline.

Wheat towards the close of the week crossed $1.70 in Chicago after a series of sharp fluctuations.

The government's weekly wheat report for the whole country was quite encouraging.

"Prices still lower, but consumption better," reports this industry.

General Motors makes the cheerful announcement that dealers' sales to consumers last month, 97,359 cars and trucks, "the largest month in the history of the corporation" with the one exception of April, 1923. From other leading manufacturers come similarly stimulating reports.

It is worth noting that new life insurance taken out during the first third of this year eclipsed all previous totals.

The Lumber Manufacturers' Association reports: "For the first time this year the lumber industry in production, shipments, sales and orders has passed the mark set in 1924."

Westinghouse's April orders are described as the largest in the last twelve months.

Sugar prices, after having been very weak, have advanced.

Lead was marked up during the week.

"The leather industry is in a more favorable condition than it has shown at any other time since the general industrial and trade depression of 1920-21," the Guaranty Trust Company of New York declares as a result of an extensive survey.

Rubber has had a sensational advance due to the artificial restricted shipments by foreign growers and the automobile boom in this country.

"Gasoline prices rise despite increase in oil production" reads a newspaper headline.

Cotton consumption of domestic spinners last month exceeded all previous April records and was the heaviest the industry has ever known with the exception of a brief period two years ago.

The week brought a larger number than usual of cheerful dividend declarations.

WATCH FOREIGN MARKETS, IS KLEIN'S PLEA

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor.

Dr. Julius Klein, former Harvard professor, now very successfully conducting Secretary Hoover's bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in Washington, tells of "prosperity grasshoppers" crowd the morgue of business failures. He urges more serious attention to foreign markets during good times at home. He used the old "grasshopper and ant" fable in contrasting industrialists who "flutter in and out of export trade at each shadow in domestic business," with those farsighted business men who maintain balanced sales and progress throughout the seasons as a result of well developed and continuous attention to overseas opportunities.

"The cheerful chirpers who are today reveling in the sunshine of their local trade without a thought for future plans, and for the security which can only be assured by numerous diversified outlets," he said, "are the same ones who squirrel about in the storms of 1920-21 searching everywhere for a haven in some foreign market. But instead of their anxious query of those dark days, 'can we export' one hears now an impatient, 'why worry about foreign trade.'"

Samuel Insull, who is back of a large number of New England electric light, power and gas companies, has grand opera for a hobby. Out in Chicago, to date, he has found opera far less successful from a business point of view than his other far flung projects with expenses in the past season exceeding income by around $400,000.

W. C. Durant, former Boston auto wizard, whose stock market operations have taken up a lot of space in the financial pages in the past—probably near the lion's share given to any one man—will keep you busy, if you try to follow the fluctuations of his various motors. Under the head of "Durant Motor Issues" one firm gives the quotations on eighteen securities.

New England users as well as growers of the votive plant of Milady Nicotine in Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire, will be interested in a statement from Secretary of Agriculture Jardine to the effect that tobacco is one of major sources of income for American farming. Tobacco industry this year will pay more in taxes than was collected by government from all internal revenue sources prior to 1914, according to Commissioner Blair, who estimated tax collections from this industry alone will approximate $345,000,000. He said production of cigarettes this year will reach total of 73,000,000,000, increase of 56,000,000,000 in past ten years.

Thomas H. Bell, new president of National Association of Worsted and Woolen Spinners, declares that the industry has cause to be optimistic because of evidence of sound conditions in this country and assurance the present administration has given that it will do all in its power to farther American business and industry. He regards increased importations of foreign woolen and worsted goods as a menace to our home industry.

We had wondered for years before this week who decided to call the Ford car a Ford and who designed the quaint script in which the name Ford appears. Now we are told the gentleman accountable for christening the first Ford and fashioning the characters in the name was C. H. Wills, an early associate of Henry Ford and now builder of his own car, the Wills-St. Claire.

Cotton Barely Steady

New York cotton prices were barely steady, from 2 to 13 points lower. May sold at 22.98, down 2 points; July 22.18, down 8; October 21.87, down 13.

Wall Street Gossip

STEWART-WARNER Corporation March quarter shows $2.17 earned on stock against $1.76 in December quarter.

RUMOR says Humble Oil & Refining, controlled by Standard Oil of New Jersey, contemplates 100 per cent. stock dividend in near future.

Radio Sales Gain

Electric Products Manufacturing reports radio sales for first quarter of 1925 amounting to $120,000, equivalent to about 40 per cent. of sales for 1924.

Sterling Unchanged

Demand sterling was at $4.85¼, unchanged; francs 5.19 cents, off .01¼ cent.

HARVARD VIEW ON BUSINESS CHEERFUL

Harvard Economic Service says:

While community markets have not yet stabilized, it seems improbable that the recession will go much further or that it will continue much longer.

The automobile industry, which accumulated large stocks of cars in the Spring of 1924, has this year adjusted its output to actual sales; and building operations are active, with costs no higher than they were a year ago.

While current orders for merchandise are in small amounts, deliveries are prompt and the total movement of traffic is heavy. Money rates have eased.

We believe the volume of forward orders will pick up, commodity prices will cease to decline and by midsummer forward buying on a more generous scale will result in a stable or, possibly, a rising level of prices.

We believe that the year 1925 will prove to be another fairly good business year in most branches of industry and trade; not an unusual year like 1923, but probably a better year than 1924.

A boom, characterized by capacity operations in manufacturing industry and by sharply rising commodity prices, is unlikely during the Autumn, in view of the conservative temper of the business community.

A moderate and healthy expansion which avoids the excesses that inevitably invite reaction is the desirable thing on all accounts; and we believe that such an expansion will follow the period of stabilization which probably is now close at hand.

WINNING "LAST LINE" For Limerick No. 73

(Published Monday, May 11)

First prize of $5.00 won by Wilson H. Thorne, of No. 575 Eastern Avenue, East Lynn, with "last line" printed below:

A novice awarded first prize,
Could scarcely believe her own eyes.
It just goes to show,
You never can know—
The talent you have in disguise.

INCOMPLETE PRIZE JINGLE No. 79

(Published Monday, May 18)

Boy friend and I, out for a stroll
Parked ourselves on a shady knoll.
Soon I began to dance
As it was filled with ants,

. . . .

Write your own "last line" here, and mail to the "Limerick Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass."

Name . . . .

Street . . . . City . . . .

GO TO CIRCUS FREE OF ANY CHARGE!

Do you wish to go to the circus free of charge?

If you do, (and who doesn't) here is a fine opportunity of doing so.

Use your brain for a few minutes in composing a "last line" to today's Jingle and if you send in one of the cleverest submitted you will be awarded one pair of best orchestra seats to the Hagenbeck—Wallace Circus and Buffalo Bill's Wild West show which will be at the Andrew Square, South Boston, grounds for one week beginning next Monday.

Ten pairs of these seats for afternoon or evening performances will be given for best "last lines" to today's limerick. Here is a good chance, folks, for you to see this marvelous circus and Wild West Show with its dashing bareback riders, clowns, thrilling aerial acts and numerous trained beasts of the jungle.

Five pairs of best orchestra seats for tonight's opening performance of "Oh Mama!" at the Plymouth Theatre in which Alice Brady is starred, were awarded for clever "last lines" to Limerick No. 76 to the following persons:—George D. B. Catlin, Hotel Commonwealth, Boston; Herbert N. Bradford, P. O. Box 302, Lynn; Miss Shepard, No. 642 Beacon street, Boston; Bertha M. Davis of 8 Moore street, Cambridge, and George W. Carroll, No. 7 Arcadia place, Dorchester.

"Oh Mama!" is a French comedy by Louis Verneuil, adapted by Wilton Lackaye, and produced by William A. Brady, father of the star. Many fans who have admired Alice Brady in the movies are planning to see her in person during her Boston stay.

Five pairs of best seats for tonight's performance of "The Pops" in Symphony Hall for best "last lines" submitted to Jingle No. 74 were awarded to the following persons: Mrs. Helen A. Ham, No. 114 Chestnut street, Everett; E. F. Lawlor, No. 50 Bigelow street, Quincy; Edna A. Colbath, No. 189 Arsenal street, Watertown; Mrs. Susan A. Foster, No. 25 Cortes street, Boston; Grace M. Frame, No. 1726 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton.

Miss Pauline Phillips of Tower avenue, Lynn, wrote as follows:

"Kindly accept my sincere thanks for your personal letter of April 23d. It certainly was an inspiration to find that you take a personal interest in the contestants in the Limerick tournament. With my dollar award I bought a pair of silk hose for my dear mother and, needless to say, she was very much pleased."

Another prize winner is Charles L. Way of Beacon street, Boston, who writes:

"I am in receipt of your check for first prize 'Last Line' Limerick No. 511 in your enjoyable contest. I am glad to be one of your 'big enthusiastic family.' Have been a reader of your paper for a number of years and consider it one of the leaders in the news world."

On her first effort to 'last line' one of the limericks in our Jingle tournament, Helene McLeod of East Milton street, Readville, was awarded a John Hancock Cartridge Fountain Pen. In telling of it she writes:

"I was delighted to receive a letter from you telling me that I had won a fountain pen. This was the first limerick that I had tried and you can understand how glad I was. I am going to keep on trying until I win the first prize, which I hope will be before long."

A Prize Cartoon

Joseph Pulitzer, Who Came From Europe, Would Have Thrown It Out

To this picture, headed "News From the Outside World," is awarded the Pulitzer prize for "the best cartoon published in any American newspaper during the year." Joseph Pulitzer, if he were here, would say: "Give me back my prize and throw that cartoon in the waste basket."

Joseph Pulitzer, resting peacefully in his grave, would turn around rapidly if he could see this cartoon, ridiculing the United States for attending to its own business. The idea of the cartoon is to present Uncle Sam as one of three tramps, with no decent position in the world, the other two tramps being Russia and Mexico.

They are seated around a "hobo" fire, reading news of the great, dignified countries tied up in a League of Nations.

Uncle Sam is reading "48 Nations Agree Upon League Peace Pact." And the idea of this "prize cartoon," which should have had the BOOBY prize, is to show that Uncle Sam is a poor down-and-out tramp, because he doesn't make himself No. 49 in the European League of Nations.

If Joseph Pulitzer had been alive this cartoon would never have been printed in his paper. And if he were here he would say, "Give me back my prize money. What fool gave it to this picture?"

Pulitzer was born in the land of the League of Nations, born in Hungary and educated in Vienna, and, because he happened to have Jewish blood, he never could be considered any man's social equal in Austria or Hungary, even though he might have, as he DID, fifty times the average ability.

If Pulitzer were here he would say to those that gave his prize money to this cartoon, "Young gentlemen, look once more at the words that Uncle Sam is reading. And THINK again about those words, '48 Nations Agree.'

"Has it escaped your attention that Uncle Sam himself happens to be the boss of 48 NATIONS, 48 GREAT STATES, that also agree among themselves?

"I didn't come to this country, escaping the complications, quarrels, race and religious prejudices of Europe, with any idea of pushing the United States into THAT mess.

"Leave out such cartoons, talk straight Americanism, try to convince yourselves that the United States is sufficiently powerful and intelligent to manage its own affairs. Also try to convince yourselves that George Washington, who advised you to keep out of European entanglements with foreign countries, knew more than Lord Balfour, or some flabby pacifist afraid of getting into a fight, or even Woodrow Wilson himself."

Pulitzer, who established the New York World and left part of his fortune to be distributed in prizes for cartoons, editorials, etc., would ask, if he could see this cartoon and know that his money had been awarded to it, one of his favorite questions, "MUST a judge in a contest be a fool?"

Glory in Defeat

Every American knows that it is easier to be a famous pitcher on a winning than on a losing team. The same truth holds in war. Nevertheless, just as Walter Johnson was appreciated before his team became a winner, so some of the most celebrated generals have been losers.

Hannibal is the outstanding instance. Robert E. Lee, however, all the time takes his place more securely. In a new book by General Maurice this well-known soldier and critic puts Lee in the small group made up of Hannibal, Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Gustavus, Turenne, Eugene and Frederick. He thus gets into a company in which is found neither Wellington nor Grant.

Not always is final victory the test. It is an extraordinary fact that out of the World War, so much greater in scale than any other, nobody emerged on either side who has a chance of being elected to the little group of military geniuses.

How Not to Grow Old -:- -:- By T. E. Powers

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

ALAS, my Daughter, what Married Man doth not in his secret soul account himself persecuted?

For, verily, before marriage, a man notest exery tender little thing which a woman doeth for his sake; but, after marriage, he observeth only those things which she forgetteth to do.

What though she mend his socks faithfully and religiously? If she leaveth but one thin spot through which he may poke his toe, then will he raise his voice, crying, "Behold, how am I NEGLECTED."

Helen Rowland

Though she tempt his palate and guard his digestion with all her devotion for six days of the week, yet, if upon the seventh day she placeth before him ONE dish which his dietist forbiddeth, then doth he sigh bitterly, calling himself, "Martyr."

Though she be ready and waiting for him, as the patient Griselda, for ninety-and-nine times, yet, if upon the hundredth she delayeth him for ten minutes, he honketh the horn of his car raucously, and reproacheth her as a, "Time-Waster."

Though she sew ALL the buttons on his pajamas save ONE, yet he observeth only the missing button and accounteth himself "Persecuted."

Though she preserve all his raiment from the ravages of moths, and overlook but one antique flannel shirt, a time shall come when her ears shall be smitten with his cries of protest, and he shall revile her, saying:

"Woman, woman! Behold what thou hast done! For that which thou seest before thee was my HUNTING SHIRT, and the apple of mine eye!"

Go to, my Daughter! Who can doubt that Sweet Alice Ben Bolt "wept with delight" at the smile of a man's approval!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Borah and World Court

Editor Boston Evening American:

I desire to voice my opinion in support of Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, in his attack on the World Court. He calls the the World Court a mere adjunct to the League of Nations, and the League—itself an institution controlled by selfish political interests. Senator Borah made it plain that he was not bound by any political reasons to oppose the United States entering the League or World Court. The people defeated President Wilson who advocated the League. Why not test the validity of the World Court in the same manner and put an end to the insidious propaganda to force this country into the so-called court.

What is more explicit and concise than Senator Borah's argument that the World Court is under the domination and control of an "international political institution," that the League would lend intimately to a military alliance, that it now contains the basis of every military alliance ever existed or created.

Did The Hague prevent nations from alliance? Did it prevent nations from carrying out intrigues against each other? Let us turn back to the year 1914 for the answer and we will find it in tragic results wrought by the war in every country. Let us insure ourselves against this tragedy again, by an efficient air force.

JOSEPH P. PHELAN.

Brookline.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The force of education is so great that we may mold the minds and manners of the young into what shape we please and give them the impressions of such habits as shall ever after remain. —Atterbury.

In Hospital Three Times

Helping Hand Editor:

I have three boys, ten, nine and six, and my husband has been out of work for over a year on account of sickness. He has been in the hospital three times. He goes in overalls and an old sweater to look for work, as he hasn't a pair of pants or suit to wear. He wears size 38 or 40 and shoes 7 or 7½. I expect the stork soon and haven't a thing. My boys need shoes, sizes 12½, 13 and 8. I take size 40, shoes 4 or 4½. I also need bedclothes. I hope some kind reader will help me, as we need it badly. MARIE, JR.

Young Mother Pleads

Helping Hand Editor:

I am a young mother with three boys, ages 11, 8 and 5 and a little brother 10 to care for. I would greatly appreciate clothing, shoes etc., for them, as I am in very poor circumstances. I also need clothing badly, size about 36 and shoe 4.

MRS. M. D. 2.

Others in Need

A full size crib and mattress may be had by a needy family in or around Medford. Communicate with the editor.

Mrs. T-1, whose husband is a war vet and in delicate health, and who has had hardly any work all winter, asks for clothes and shoes, size 6, for twin boys, age three, and infant, three months old. She also needs sheets and pillow cases.

Mrs. C. C. H. would give about thirty books of fiction by some of the best authors to any kind reader who would give her a last year's suit or coat, size 38 or 40. She hasn't a thing to wear out of doors and never owned a nice dress, she writes.

Mrs. M. A. L., with four small children needs shoes, size 11, 11½ and 7½, and for baby 16 months old. She needs shoes, size 8¼, and dress and spring coat size 3S, also hat. She is a widow and what little she gets from the city is used to pay rent and buy food.

Mrs. H. B. T., living in New Hampshire, has a baby a month old who is in need of short clothes and a stroller or carriage.

Mrs. R. writes her husband is not working and she has five small children, girls, 12 and 8 and boys, 10 and 4, who are greatly in need of clothing, also expects the stork soon and has nothing ready for it. She has nothing to wear and is obliged to stay indoors. She is very frail and should get the fresh air.

Mrs. N. B. W. will give a good home to a girl around 12 or 13 years of age.

Mrs. C. W., poor widow of sixty, crippled from rheumatism, would appreciate some bedclothes and a few things to wear, such as a coat, etc., size 42 or 44.

Mr. J. M. K. I would appreciate clothing for boys, 9, 7 and 2, and girls, 11, 8, 2 and 9 months. Small income will not permit buying any.

ONCE-OVERS

YOU OWE IT TO YOUR FRIENDS TO STOP THE GOSSIP OF SCANDAL MONGERS

When a person comes to you with a malicious and hateful story about one of your friends, refuse to listen to it.

Just consider how you would feel to have such a story circulated about yourself.

Considering that your friend is not present to protect himself or herself, it is up to you to try to stop such reports.

Whether it be true or not is not the vital matter just then.

To stop damaging gossip at its source is the duty of one friend to another.

And that is just the point—find out the source of the tales, if possible, because that really puts an end to the matter as far as giving it impulse is concerned.

In the first place, if the story demands it, make it very certain in the mind of the bearer of evil reports that you will see that the reports get to the person with his or her own name attached to them.

Such a course generally brings out the name of the one who told the tale-bearer with whom you are conversing. In any case it will be sure to stir up something that the scandal monger will not want. Don't be afraid.

REAL GOOD IN WORLD DONE BY EXAMPLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WE are instructed by Holy Writ not to let the one hand know what the other hand doeth, and we are told that our Father, which seeth in secret, will reward openly our secret doings.

All this is an emphasis upon the nature of the truth which is often overlooked. For truth is quiet. The best part of every deed cannot be advertised.

The most potent force in the world comes from the sun, and sunlight makes no noise, but sheds its influence silently upon the earth. It is the source of all power among us. It raises the tides and the sap in the trees, besides making volcanoes and torrents, indirectly.

In fact, nothing in the world, from an atom of hydrogen to God in His heaven, that is, nothing that is real, is wholly exposed to view.

That is the trouble with idolatry, for an idol is plain and clear with nothing left to the imagination. We can look around him and walk around him and criticize him and handle him. We can pack him in a box and take photographs of him.

This in itself proves that he is a sham. At every point Nature disowns him and says, "His is not mine."

"His all-completeness," says Mr. Jacks, "betrays him. His finish undoes him. Becoming known at all points, he becomes, at the same time, not worth knowing, except perhaps to the police. They labor in vain to discredit religion by proving the unknowableness of God. What discredits religion is not the unknowableness of God, but the knowableness of mumbo-jumbo."

Professionally doing good implies the conviction of a certain superiority on the part of ourselves and inferiority of those we are doing good to. If you are a real democrat, and see deeply into the nature of things, you will not make an effort to improve others, but yourself.

You may rest assured that the best way to do good in this world is to mind one's own business and to do one's own work well, for the real good of the world is done by example and not by precept.

THE WABBLING OF THE POLES

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

"You say that the earth's axis wobbles, through a radius of about thirty feet. Has this wobble a definite period; if so what is the time?

"Is it another wobble that causes the possession of the equinoxes? If so, what are the radius and period of this? Does the earth follow the axis, or does the axis move inside the earth, as in the first mentioned wobble.—M. M., Providence, R. I."

ASTRONOMERS call the wobbling of the earth's axis "vibration of latitude." This shows that it is not the direction in space of the axis around which the earth turns, but its direction inside the globe of the earth, that periodically changes.

In its effect this resembles, sufficiently for the purpose of a general illustration, the wobbling of a wheel whose hub is loose on the axle. One of our figures shows how the point where the north pole of the earth pierces its surface travels around the point representing the direction of the axis in space.

This has been picturesquely called "a wandering of the pole over the surface of the earth." It may also be described as a revolution of the pole of rotation around the axis of figure of the earth.

Its period is about fourteen months, but it is irregular, being a combination of two wobbles," one "a yearly motion in an ellipse whose longest radius is fourten feet and shortest four feet; and the second a motion in a circle of radius fiteen feet which is described in about 428 days."

In the picture only a few turns are shown, in order simply to illustrate the nature of the movement, which takes place in a counter clockwise direction. Some astronomical periodicals publish, from year to year, similar sketches showing the actual motion. For a number of years the pole gets farther and farther away; then it turns in, and sometimes approaches quite close to the centre.

The principal causes underlying these movements are believed to be, for the annual motion, changes in the burdens of ice and snow on the earth's surface, and for the 428-day period dynamical effects arising from the earth's rotation in connection with its elasticity, a subject too technical for discussion here.

See the chapter on latitude variation in H. H. Turner's "Astronomical Discovery." One of the wonders of the subject is that so slight a change in the position of the pole could be detected and measured by observations of the stars. But if mathematical physicists had not proved that it ought to exist, probably astronomers would never have looked for its effects on the apparent positions of stars.

The other phenomenon—the precession of the equinoxes—does not recall the wobble of a loosely fitted wheel, but the graceful nodding swing of a spinning top, and one can hardly get a clear understanding of its cause without having at least the picture of a top before him.

The top's peg is like the earth's axis. Like the top, the earth has a comfortable girth, a little superabundance of equatorial diameter. In the picture the downward pointing arrow shows how gravitation strives to bring the spinning top down by pulling where a pull is most effective. But by virtue of the gyroscopic principle, the top, instead of falling, swings round and round.

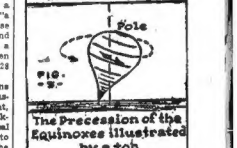

FIG. 3.
The Precession of the Equinoxes illustrated by a top

This resembles precession of the equinoxes, for in like manner the pull of sun and moon on the earth's equatorial protuberance tends to tip it down by pulling where a pull is most effective. But by virtue of the gyroscopic principle, the top, instead of falling, swings round and round.

This resembles precession of the equinoxes, for in like manner the pull of sun and moon on the earth's equatorial protuberance tends to tip over the earth's axis, but only succeeds in making that axle revolve around the pole of the earth's orbit.

It requires 25,800 years for a single revolution. The radius of the precessional circle is about 23½ degrees, amounting at his earth's surface, to about 1,000 miles.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

THE old philosophies may prove, that life is hard at best, and they may show man's gladdest day is when he goes to rest; to rest to which no dreams shall come, no hint of joy or pain, to sleep, oblivious of the snow or April's tender rain. And, sometimes, for a little while, I'm tempted to agree, until I hear a meadow-lark upon a lonely tree. How swiftly then old sorrows pass, old weariness goes by, when song floats back from where the lark goes soaring in the sky! Oh, little bird with golden breast, your song across the plain rings out in such magical refrain that all the old philosophies may try in vain to prove this Earth is aught but sun and bloom, this life is aught but love!
